BUSTED AGAIN.
The Blanks when New Year came around Both signed a resolution That they wouldn't break-oh, no mistake—
Until their dissolution.

She would not say an unkind word Nor never call him "Stik."
And home henceforth she'd make for him A heaven of sweet bits.

His temper Blank henceforth would hold Within an iron grip
And never pull her false hair off Nor call her "You old rip!"

But she his razor used for corns.
He broke a china plate.
This complicated everything
And led to a debate.

Then her emergency wouldn't work;
Her tongue just flew round loose.
His temper blew the safety off
At such awful abuse.

There was a fearful blowout then.
They both joyrided rash.
The shebang took an awful skid
And busted all to smash.

C. M. BARNITZ.

A BOMB PROOF HERO.
He stood upon the slippery deck,
Whence all but he had fled.
For airships circled o'er that ship
Like vultures o'er the dead.

When sizzled down from far above
A bomb that struck the deck.
A second more it would explode
And all would be a wreck.

Quick as a flash that hero sprang
And grasped that bomb-ah, me!
And threw it like a lightning stroke
Into the rolling sea.

Where it blew up with awful crash.
And on the shore, afar,
Ten thousand window panes were cracked
By the tremendous jar.

Then congress called that hero up Before its august bar
And gave him a gold medal For great bravery in war.

"And now," asked he who made the speech,
"Where did you get such nerve
That in the midst of hurdling bombs
Your courage did not swerve?"

"Oh, sir," the hero brave replied,
"I once lived on a farm
And oft handled hot haymow eggs,
And they did me no harm!"

"And I worked in a storage house Where they store old hen fruit,
And there I saw whole crates blow up With a tremendous 'out.'"

CROSSING TURKEYS.

While not an advocate of crossing the different varieties of turkeys, in these days when good stock is scarce it is sometimes necessary to go outside your line to infuse new blood to keep the flock up to the standard or to strengthen its weak points. A cross with the wild turkey is the best, but hard to secure, as the wild species is almost extinct, and much of the wild blood for sale is spurious.

The most popular cross is Mammoth Bronze and White Holland.

A beautiful thirty-five pound gobbler of this cross is shown. While the Narragansett and Bourbon Red are nearer

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.
Yes, turkeys like fresh air, and their thick feathers are a protection against cold. But there's a limit. They should be protected against fierce storms and fed regularly and well during the winter.

This is certainly a big country and most too large for the law to handle, and it certainly is a task to catch all the food dopers. Tuberculosis beef and meat fixed with preservatives are sold to the public without compunction or fear of detection. The best way to get ahead of such swindlers is to eat less meat or raise your own.

The shipments of poultry, eggs and feathers from the 114 counties of Missouri last year reached $30,902,410.
Missouri's poultry product is $50,000,- 000 per year, the result of pushing poultry culture, and every state in the Union has the same chance.

There ought to be at least a nest to every four hens, and each nest should just fit one hen comfortably. Where two hens can get on the same nest a fight and broken eggs may be expected.

You fellows that raise wheat needn't hold your heads so high. The whole wheat crop of 50,184,000 acres was only $610,120,000. The American hen's egg crop was over $500,000,000, and that was only half her crop and from much less land than the wheat acreage and with less expense.

A brooder house pays best where a good number of chicks must be hatched.

Over 75,000 auto licenses were issued in Pennsylvania the past season, and mighty few of them didn't average killing one chicken. Pretty hard on farm poultry, but as an offset they paid a tax of $750,000, to be applied to road building.

When news came from the North American egg laying competition that an Englishman's White Leghorn had broken the world's record by laying 292 eggs in a year, English fanciers went glad and Americans got sad and mad. But read this, you cranks: An American hen, half Leghorn and White Rock, has just skinned them all by finishing her year's record at the Oregon experiment station to the tune of 293 eggs. She did not stop to celebrate, but kept right on laying.
Next.

DON'TS.

Don't delay in ordering that new incubator early. Long waits for incubators are generally caused by long delays before ordering.

Don't put in a mammoth incubator unless your business warrants it and then only section by section as business expands.

Don't forget that the thermometer is the gauge by which you run the machine. Test the thermometer occasionally and thus save loss.

Don't buy bargains in hatching machinery. Good incubators are worth good money and can't be built for less.

Don't hang on to old appliances when you can afford to buy the modern.

Don't breed fowls that are off shape or color and then call them by a standard breed name.

Don't be satisfied until you are an expert specialist in your line. Men who generalize seldom realize a fortune.

Don't weep over blisters. Success and blisters are twin sisters.

Don't expect no ups and downs in life, but refuse to be the under dog.

Don't waste the feathers. White feathers bring the highest price. White Eublen bring most per pound.

OVERWORKING THE HEN.

Hens, where system is used, are as much harnessed as a horse and may be driven to death or rendered unfit for future profit, or their energy may be so conserved that a good profit on the investment may be returned.
Many drive their hens too hard in winter.

To get eggs in quantity they feed much rich, forcing food to stimulate the ovary, and thus digestive system and egg machinery are both overtaxed.
To get eggs many feed red pepper, fenugreek, mustard or patented egg dope. These may hurry a few eggs ahead of the natural schedule, but cause injury to oviduct and digestive system, often kill the hen or burn out her egg machinery so she never lays again. It does seem cowardly to sneak dope into an unsuspecting hen's food.
It often causes suffering and certainly is unnecessary where hens are of good stock, the proper age and properly cared for. People should be satisfied with a fair return on the investment, but high egg prices influence some to thus drive their hens too fast. This is why breeding stock is often no good in the spring. They have been "worked to death" all winter, and what eggs they lay are generally small, infertile or hatch weak chicks.
