WARSHIP BUNTING

It Takes a Lot of Flags to Fit Out Uncle Sam's Navy.

USE COLORS OF ALL NATIONS.

Each of the Big Vessels Carries About Five Hundred Ensigns of Various Kinds and Sizes-Severe Tests to Which the Material Is Subjected.

Something like $80,000 a year is required to keep Uncle Sam's many naval vessels properly equipped with flags. In addition most every other department of the government appropriates various sums for flags for buildings and ships under its control. In all, it is safe to say the United States spends $125,000 a year for flags.

The largest factory belongs to the navy. In a large room, called the "flag loft," at Brooklyn navy yard half a hundred skilled needlewomen and quite a few men are kept constantly at work Officially it is the naval fing making es-

Thousands of flags are required to supply the hundreds of vessels, from battleships to launches. On entering the flag loft the visitor's first impression is a blaze of color. Rolls of bright bunting are heaped everywhere. Long lines of electrically driven sewing machines, with women operators, are reeling off and putting the finishing touches to American and foreign ensigns of many different hues and sizes. In addition to our own flag, the navy has to keep a supply of every other nation in world which has a coast line.

Each battleship, cruiser, gunboat or scout in the navy requires about 500 flags to outfit its flag locker properly. Heaped up, they make a pile shoulder high and twenty or twenty-five feet long. The foreign flags, incased in canvas bags, bear the name of the country stenciled on the end. The remainder, including flags for ordinary use, signaling, etc., are wrapped without bags and numbered at the end. Each flag has its separate place in the flag locker. A quartermaster would be re-buked severely if one became misplaced. Each ship follows the same order in this, so that any one familiar with the flag locker on one ship knows the location of every flag on any ship.

Uncle Sam pays about $3,500 to outfit each ship in the service. This multiplied by the number of ships will show that flags are not an inconsequential item of naval expense. The foreign ensigns are all made twenty-five feet long and thirteen feet wide. They are used whenever an American warship enters a port of another nation. The flag of the visited nation is hoisted at the top of the foremast while the American ship salutes. It is also hoisted when returning salutes of foreign vessels in American ports.

The most showy and expensive flags in the lot are those of foreign nations. although the United States has two flags that are close rivais, the flags of the president and vice president. They require the longest time to make of any flags. It takes one woman a month to finish each one. The president's flag is a bine ground with the coat of arms of the United States in the center. The life sized engle with outstretched wings and other emblems are all hand embroidered in silk. The silk used costs $9 a pound. The vice president's flag is the coat of arms on a field of white. Both flags are made in two sizes, 10 by 14 feet and 3 by 5 feet. The larger is used on ships and the smaller on launches and similar craft.

The largest flag made is the United feet. It costs $40.

The bunting used in flag making is put to severe tests before the flag makers use it. One day a sample bundle is washed in soap and water. The next day the same process is followed with sait water. It is then exposed to the weather for ten days, thirty hours of which must be in the bright sun. If it doesn't fade in that test the government experts pass it. Then two inches wide of the warp is subject to a pulling strain of sixty-five pounds. Even with all those precautions a ship is allowed a new set of flags every three years, while the signal flags and ship and boat ensions in frequent use must be replaced every few weeks.

One flag or pennant, rather, most used by the navy and least known to the public is the commission pennant. It is hoisted to the masthead of every naval vessel when it goes into commission and is never removed. It is a long, narrow streamer, blue at the staff, with thirteen stars in the field, arranged in one line, and the dag divided into two stripes, red and white, the red at the top. When ships long on foreign stations leave for home a new commission pennant is always hoisted. Usually it is one made and paid for by the crew. In some cases those "homeward bounders" stretch out 300 feet and, made of silk, cost a pretty penny.

The thousands of white stars used in our own and many other ensigns are made by an electrically driven machine which cuts them in fifty or s hundred lots. Eight different sizes of stars are used .- Kansas City Star.

Superfluity.

"You never admit having made a

"What's the use?" asked Senator Sorghum. "When I make a mistake there are always plenty of people to talk about it without my joining in."-Washington Star.

WEIRD HOUSE WARMING.

Bad For the Old and Helpless Natives In Dutch New Guines.

Concerning a peculiar custom discovered among the natives of Dutch New Guines, this interesting description is given by A. F. R. Wollaston in the Geographical Journal: "On top of the first steep ridge we came to the first native dwelling that we had seen in the country. It was a rectangular wooden structure, raised on piles about five feet from the ground. A sloping ladder or two or three poles tied together leads to a narrow platform, behind which is the living room about ten or twelve feet square. In the middle of the floor is a square fireplace, usually lined with sand or small stones. The walls are made of split poles placed closely together, and the roof is made of the leaves of pandanus or of a palm if any happen to grow in the neighborhood. There was a mystery about that first house which we were never able to solve. It was evidently quite newly built, a small clearing had been made about it and a few banana and dracoenas recently planted.

"Outside the house were a number of men, women and children, the men occupied in cooking large quantities of yams and sweet potatoes and great lumps of pig's flesh. We naturally supposed that it was a sort of house warming, as in one sense it turned out to be. The men shook their heads and pointed in a mysterious way toward the house and made the curious sign which they are accustomed to make when they talk of something disagreeable. Then they invited us to enter the house, where we found an old man sitting by the fire. He was diseased and decrepit, but appeared by no means likely to die. He took a keen interest in our appearance and enjoyed the tobacco which we gave

"When we returned five days later we found the place utterly deserted and the house a blackened beap of ashes, on the top floor of which were lying the charred remains of human bones. It was impossible for any one to say five days earlier that the old man was going to die-indeed, he must have lived for months or even years What we may imagine to have hap pened was this: That as he was unable to get about any longer and find his own food, his relations did not intend to support him and that the preparations we saw were really for his funeral feast, but we were puzzled by their having cremated him in a newly built house."

MADE HIMSELF SAFE.

Young Bessemer Had a Cautious as Well as an Inventive Head.

The most trivial incidents have often originated the fortunes of our richest men. Take, for example, the fortunes made out of Bessemer steel. This genius, young Bessemer, had some idea of making steel out of iron, but a poor, newly married young man has no means of experimenting on a large scale. The story I must tell as I heard it from an intimate friend of Bessemer and is a true tale.

After Bessemer had in his small laboratory experimented with the metals and at last obtained the desired result by blowing air through melted fron he found in the bottom of the crucible a little lump of the famous steel. Now the question was how to make the dis-covery public. He put the lump of steel into his pocket and made his way to Nasmyth of steam hammer fame. Placing the metal on Nasmyth's desk, he told him that he had made this extraordinary discovery, which would revolutionize the whole metal world.

Then came a little incident which shows what wonderful heads these Scotch financiers possess. What do you think Nasmyth said to his excited inventor?

"Eh, mon, it's vary risky to show your wonderful invention. The world is vary dishonest."

To which the aspiring inventor replied:

"Right, Mr. Nasmyth. I just calculated who I was coming to see, so with my last half crown I registered the invention on my way."-London Strand Magazine.

A Cross Bull. The late Lord Cross never added greatly to the humor of the nation. On one occasion, however, while he was still in the house of commons he tried to be sarcastic during a speech.

"I think," he said, fixing a certain minister with a ferocious eye, "I think I hear the right honorable gentleman smile.

After that remark, if it were any satisfaction to him, he heard the whole house laugh.-London Globe.

By Other Ways.

"I am sorry to see you going with that disreputable young fellow, my son, even if he has plenty of money and goes everywhere." "But, father, didn't you tell me to cultivate society? "I did, my lad, but not with a rake."

-Baltimore American.

Unexpected Criticism. A school inspector, examining a class m grammar, wrote a sentence on the blackboard and asked if any one noticed anything peculiar in it. After a short slience a small boy repiled. "Yes, sir: the bad writing."-London Telegraph.

Extravagance.

"Quick, quick; a doctor! I have just swallowed a penny!" "What! Spend $4 to save a penny! That's the way with you women!"-

Paris Pele Mele.
