A horse at work appreciates and is benefited by a drink of cold water in warm weather just as much as his owner.

No one in the world works harder than the farmer's wife. Because of this fact she is entitled to every convenience possible for lightening and simplifying her labors.

Little chicks should be given a chance to scratch for their chick feed. The exercise thus afforded tends to keep them in good condition and insures their rapid growth.

The world's record for cotton picking was broken the other day by Miss Mary Montgomery of Stillwater, Okla., who gathered 700 pounds in one day. This girl herself weighs 121 pounds. She is a mighty active proposition.

At a recent London flower show one exhibitor showed a practically black tulip—at least it seemed a solid black at the distance of a few feet. This is a floral product that flower specialists have been striving for for a good many years.

The hen that is cooped up with a brood of chicks should be let out frequently to dust and, if she is lousy further measures should be taken to relieve her and her chicks of the pests, for they are sure to get them if she has 'em.

To the writer there is a good deal of attraction in the old fashioned bluish-pink lilac. It is a homely color and the fragrance is nothing much, but both color and fragrance bring back the memory of many happy boyhood days when the lilac bushes were in bloom.

Not all the suckers in the country are just off the farm. This is shown in the case of the Chicago resident who the other day paid $250 in cash for what he supposed was a device for printing $2 bills—as many of them as he wanted. The country chap would know better than that.

If the geraniums get root bound it is a good idea to take slips from them and plant them in good rich soil in the flower garden. By fall, under favorable conditions, they should make thrifty plants which will give an abundance of bloom soon after they are potted and returned to the house.

The writer has found no method so good for warding off crows as that of killing two or three members of the tribe and hanging them up by the hind legs at the top of a pole eight or ten feet long. This kind of warning is so suggestive that the birds take the hint and keep at a safe distance.

It is questionable if one-half of the eggs laid by mourning doves ever come to hatching time. This is due to the fact that these birds are most inoffensive, put up with the attacks of other birds and small animals without protest and build a most slovenly and flimsy nest, which is often wrecked by the wind.

The output of California's grape industry is estimated to have a value of $30,000,000 annually. Three hundred and thirty thousand acres are devoted to the growing of grapes, 50,000 acres being table grape vines, 110,000 acres raisin grapes and 170,000 wine grapes. The total production of all kinds of grapes is put at 900,000 tons annually.

Of the poisonous plants found on the western ranches the larkspur loco weed causes the largest loss to stockmen. Cattle are the chief sufferers, as sheep are not harmed by eating the weed, while horses seldom touch it. The department of agriculture is putting forth such effort as it can to eliminate the danger from this and other poisonous weeds.

A case came to the writer's attention the other day where a hired man dropped the lines behind a four horse disk outfit to chase a nearby gopher. He did not get the gopher; but, worse than this, the horses ran away, and one of them was so badly cut with the sharp disks that it had to be shot. The instance as related seems to make quite plain the wisdom of the old saw that urged the doing of one thing at a time and doing that thing well.

Every acre of garden and orchard would be the better off from the standpoint of yield of vegetables and fruit were it to have a hive of bees. The little fellows do not require a great deal of care, and $5 will give one a start with a swarm and the equipment needed to house them. Apart from the service they render in the cross fertilization of vegetable and fruit blossoms, they many times pay for their keep in the honey they produce.

Large Area Thrown Open for Settlement

Washington, June 20.—Approximately 584,000 acres of land in California and Oregon have been set aside by Secretary Lane of the Interior Department, under the enlarged homestead act, it was announced today. The designations include nearly 300,000 acres in California and 284,000 acres in Oregon.

The area included under the enlarged homestead act lies in the district of Central Oregon south of The Dalles and north of Burns. Most of the land in Eastern Oregon has already been designated under the enlarged homestead act.

Louis L. Sharp, chief of the local field division of the United States Land Office explains that under the enlarged homestead law the settlers may homestead 320 acres of land instead of the usual 160 acres. Those who have already settled on 160 acres but have not completed their title will be allowed to file on 160 additional adjoining acres. Land included under the enlarged homestead law act must be nonmineral, nontimbered and nonirrigated, and must be designated by the Secretary of the Interior as such.

The opening of the 284,000 acres in Oregon comes after a considerable effort on the part of settlers in the district opened. A much larger area has been thrown open than was expected. The reason it had not been previously opened was because its natural resources had not been properly ascertained.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has recently issued instructions that settlers and other residents of a state are entitled to procure timber to not exceed a value of $50 on the stump for their own use each year, without the necessity of securing a permit. However, it is required that any person desiring to cut timber notify the proper chief of field division of their desire to do so before proceeding with their cutting. Those in Oregon, Washington and Northern Idaho must apply to Mr. Sharp at Portland.

The cutting of timber must be confined to the mature trees, waste and damage to young undergrowth must be avoided, also the tops and debris must be so disposed of as to prevent the spread of forest fires, also all of the timber cut must be applied to the personal use of the party cutting it.
