Business Men Charged with Serious Accusations

The News says that the Journal "got the facts reversed" last week when it stated that the division forces were working overtime.

The Journal did nothing of the kind. And we repeat that it was the strenuous campaign of the division forces that aroused those of the opposition to a sense of the danger that menaced the county.

We also take this occasion to repeat that where both sides are given a fair hearing the "pros" get the worst of it. This was true of the Ashwood meeting held Tuesday evening as well as of the meetings held last week.

A few samples of some of the misleading statements made by the Madras people will serve to back up this assertion. In the first place an election expense of $5,300 is figured up against the old county while none is estimated in the budget of the proposed new county of Jefferson because no election is to be held next year. Then why do they charge election expenses to the old county. The reason is obvious.

Then again. In the Jefferson county budget $500 is allowed for widows' pensions. How long would this paltry sum last when Crook county has this year—in eight months—paid out to Jefferson county widows the sum of $18657. At the present rate it would cost the proposed new county approximately $2000 for 12 months. These cold facts knock the Madras bunch right off the perch. Get the records and see for yourself. But such misrepresentations must be made if any plausible reasons are given for a division of the county.

The Jefferson county people stated that they would have their own county fair. Well and good. But why didn't they put their millage into their estimate? It was overlooked. The millage for county expenses was growing too fast.

Just another item to show how worthless is the estimated budget of Jefferson as a vote winner: In the old county is a miscellaneous account of $3200 to take care of courthouse expenses, such as janitor, lights, water, etc., expenses that must be met, but the new county hasn't made such provision. It would add to the millage.

These are just a few sample illustrations of the misleading way in which the "pros" seek to accomplish their ends.

The News says: "Business men do not spend their time and money chasing over the country trying to influence voters because of their
