

Just a Word at the Close of this Strenuous Campaign

With this number of the Journal we have concluded our part of the discussion of the pros and cons of the county division question. The question has been brought more acutely to the attention of the people during the campaign just closed than ever before. As the discussion has warmed up, some pretty sharp words have been spoken. Upon the whole, however, the presentation that has been made during the campaign has been beneficial. It has done to be brought out and put upon display the various reasons and arguments for and against this question of dividing Crook county into two or more parts.

So far as the Journal is concerned it has sustained the negative of the proposition as best it could because it believed that side of the question to represent the best interests of all concerned. It still thinks so. Whether or not that view is correct cuts no particular figure now. The case has been presented and is now to go to the people for final judgment.

Any man who allows himself to cast his vote upon this important question through prejudice or lack of sober, serious thought, is not performing his duty as a citizen. If, when the people have spoken, it shall appear that Crook county, like all Gaul, is to be divided into three parts, well and good as far as the Journal is concerned for it realizes that the people must have what they want, especially as they pay the bills.

On the other hand if the people shall will by their votes that Crook county shall remain a solid, compact commonwealth it will suit our view of things fully as well if not better for many reasons that we have presented during the discussion to the very best of our ability.

Anyhow, it goes, it all up, whichever way it comes, the Journal feels it a duty to appeal to the people of what is now Crook county with whom it has so long labored and among whom it has so long lived, to stand together for the development and growth of Central Oregon. Let us not allow ourselves to become estranged and distracted by local contentions. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder in the great work before us of bringing our healthful and fruitful heritage up to such a standard that we may be recognized among the sisterhood of counties that comprise this great state. Not one of the least, not away along down the scale, but by united effort and a right improvement of the opportunities which divine providence has given us to take our place well up toward the lead in health, happiness and wealth.

Keep the Crook County High School Out of the Mire of Politics

It is pleasing to note that the Crook County High School has not been questioned or in any way criticized by the advocates of county division. It is creditable that we have such an institution of learning in our midst that no one, not even in the heat of county division discussion, cares to do himself or his cause the injustice to call in question either the method of operation or the real worth of that institution. It is indeed creditable that such is the case. This is one institution in Crook county that never even those who took an active part in its beginning builded better than they knew. From an humble beginning some ten or twelve years ago the Crook County High School now ranks among the best of its kind in the entire state. From some eighteen subjects, taught at first by two teachers, it has grown into an institution wherein 71 subjects are given by eight teachers, as follows:

Deschutes Project Recommended

Secretary Franklin R. Lane has advised Governor West that the reclamation service engineers have decided upon the Deschutes project as the most suitable one in this state upon which to expend the $450,000 allotted by the government for reclamation work in Oregon. This appropriation was made for expenditure during the calendar year of 1914 and was made dependent upon the appropriation of a similar amount by the state of Oregon. Unless the money from the state is forthcoming the government appropriation will expire on December 31, but it may be renewed immediately for the first of the next year.

W. A. Booth Came Off with Flying Colors

Portland—Backed by absolute proofs, R. A. Booth, republican candidate for United States senator, tore to pieces every charge brought against him by Governor West in the famous Booth-West meeting at Portland. When Booth had finished he had disproved the accusations of West in every particular, showing that the governor had not a leg to stand on in making his charges. Booth's records were government records, documents and decisions of the courts.

Booth, to show the character of West, the man who was attacking his honesty and business methods, read from records showing that West, when state land agent under Chamberlain, was working for Detective Burns in stacking the jury box which was to try the land cases of 1905. West was one of the detectives whose work was to find out if citizens were for conviction and when they were strong for conviction their names were placed in the box from which jurors were to be drawn at the trials. Booth also showed that West collected $360 mileage from the government when at most he was entitled to but $11 and when federal officials accused him of being a grafter, West turned this money into the state treasury, minus $50. The trip which West charged the state as railroad commissioner.

Having given the audience a view of West's character, Booth took up one by one the charges which West made and refuted them completely, showing that West was wrong in every instance. Time after time Booth proved that West was making false statements. It was refutation complete and in detail.

The meeting was the most orderly political gathering in the history of Portland. There was an organized crowd of West partisans who were determined to prevent Booth from answering the charges. Appeals for fair play were utterly ignored and they insisted on interrupting Booth at every opportunity. West himself was hissed when he refused to explain his connection with Burns and he was hissed when he belittled the religion of Booth. The Booth-West meeting has helped Booth immensely.

Save Industrial Oregon.

The only way to protect the future manufacturing and industrial development of Oregon is to vote against the vicious measures known as the "Water Front" bills, numbers 328 and 330 on the ballot. They are a direct attack on the prosperity of every man, woman and child in Oregon and ought to be beaten.

These measures are not only a vicious thrust at Oregon's progress but they are a veiled attack upon the public school system of the state, in that they will, if passed, deprive it of large sums of money every year. VOTE "NO" 329 and "NO" 331. Oregon Commercial Protective Association, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Oregon. paid adv.

Social Hygiene Meetings Largely Attended

The two meetings held Tuesday in the campaign for clean living were well attended.

The meeting in the afternoon for women was conducted by Mrs. H. P. Belknap. She introduced Dr. Williamson of Portland, who explained the Sex Hygiene organization of Portland. It has a committee of 21 prominent citizens who make it their business to investigate causes and spread correct information regarding sex problems. The work of this committee has been so superior that just before the European War many countries inquiring into the methods of carrying on this work:

$10,000 has been raised to carry on the educational campaign, used for the publishing and distributing of pamphlets and for the salary of a secretary. The lecturers donate their services.

Dr. Calvin White was introduced and he spoke on the conditions of today that make the work of this kind imperative. These conditions make a marked increase in temptation over that of the girls of 25 years ago.

Some of these conditions are the greater freedom of women. The rapid transit which tend to unsettle conditions by making it possible to "move on" to new places. The cheap show with its presentation of cheap problem plays. The suggestive dances and the problem novels. Dr. White also said that the home is the place where we must safeguard our children with clean knowledge of life's sacred story. Therefore, we must instruct mothers what and how to teach and they must get closer in touch with their daughters to do it. The church cannot do this. Those who need the teaching most seldom go. The school cannot do this, for too often our teachers are unprepared and also except in generalization they cannot touch upon the intimate life lessons as this must be individual instruction and should begin with the child's first question.

The evening lecture was for men only. Rev. Ramsey presided. He spoke of the present conditions and introduced Dr. Williamson who spoke on the problem, scope and principles of the Sex Hygiene organization, and introduced Dr. Calvin White who spoke at length on the four sex lies that are prevalent and believed by many of our young men. These four may be briefly included in two statements—That there is any use from any point of view to permit our boys to be unchaste while demanding virtue from our girls is unfair, false and cowardly. And second that the teaching that there is a physical necessity for sexual indulgence by the male half of the world is a lie of such magnitude that the terrible ravages of disease which result brand it as such with nature's seal of disapproval.

To the Public.
Length of residence in a community does not prove one's fitness of efficiency. Neither does the owning of property necessarily prove the public spirit of the owner. However, as one of my opponents has made inaccurate and misleading statements to the effect that he was "the only candidate for this office who is a real property owner." I will say that both Mrs. Rice and myself have paid taxes on REAL property for seven years, having acquired it a few months after coming to Prineville, about seven (7) years ago. I am not unknown to the people of Crook county, and I am ready to stand on my record of six years' public service. I ask the support of the voters of Crook county on my MERITS as a SURVEYOR and for faithful service rendered.

Democratic Candidate for Supreme Court

Judge A. S. Bennett, the well known lawyer of The Dalles, has recently written:

"I have known Judge Galloway intimately for more than forty years and have never found a better man. In both private and public life he is above suspicion or reproach. In his home, as a husband or father, he is ideal. Truthfully has it been said of Judge Galloway, 'He has in more than one instance in the past shown that he has the courage of his convictions in difficult positions, and that he has made a record for honesty and courage.' He always does his duty as he sees it, regardless of consequences, and is absolutely invulnerable to 'pressure' or 'influence.' He has a fine legal education and is very familiar with legal principles and the administration of justice generally. His courtesy and kindly disposition are well known. He would make an ideal supreme judge." pd adv

Literary Department of the Ladies Annex

Miss Biggs reviewed Chesterton's "The Bell and the Cross" at the meeting of the literary department of the Ladies' Annex Monday night. This book has two heroes who represent two types of mind and belief. One, the materialist, the other, the idealist, meet and so misunderstand and antagonize each other that they decide to fight a duel in order to vindicate their individual positions before the world.

This duel is attempted and prevented time and again until in the intervals the two men learn to understand each other and to love each other. Hence, the idealist wins a bloodless victory, as love is ideal and not material. Next Monday Mrs. Elliott will review the last book in the course, Bennett's "A Great Man." The course will be completed November 9 by a general discussion of the problems and solutions as presented by the different authors. Mrs. Walker will have charge of this meeting.
