REAL DEVELOPMENT

It is an established fact that good fortune, like misfortune, very often comes in large consignments.

It is also a recognized truth that the merit of any individual or community, or its lack of worth or misdeeds will prevail ultimately in shaping the future of the community or individual.

As a further proof of the first statement, the Prineville country is entering a new epoch of development that will place it in the first rank of enterprising and worth while communities of the Northwest.

This has been brought about by the building of the Prineville railroad, the Ocho Irrigation District, and the positive fact that at least one large saw mill and one other irrigation project near the city are in the immediate future.

And these things are but proof of the second axiom mentioned above. The worth of the community has long been recognized. It has a reputation for sending before the world, statements of fact that have proven true, and in every instance the worth of enterprises here have been established as more than estimated by the resident population.

The community has been recognized as the cattle feeding center of the state for a number of years, lacking only in shipping facilities and quantity of hay produced.

Both of the obstacles have now been removed, and the community at once steps from the commonplace to the very highest place in the great northwest territory.

Real development, development that will bring greater things to Prineville than has been imagined by the most optimistic, is in store for the community.

We have never prophesied that Prineville would become a city but we do venture that she will be the best town in all interior Oregon for many more years at least.

Just two weeks remain to prepare your exhibits for the Oregon Inter-State Fair.

We will have more visitors this year than ever before, and they will be more interested than usual also. Many of them will decide whether or not to make their homes in the community during the week, and the exhibits at the fair will help in that decision.

Bring out your products, livestock and whatever you have to help in making the fair a success.

The Washington Inter-State Fair is held at Spokane. Their opening day attendance was less than ten per cent of the city's population. We should have an opening day attendance here of 100 per cent. Plan now to come.
