

PRINEVILLE CITIZENS WILL WEAR CHAPS

The Prineville delegation to the Land Products Show at Portland will leave Redmond on a special car over the Oregon Trunk on the evening of November 21, and will meet at the Imperial Hotel in Portland the following day.

November 22 is Prineville day, Stockmen's day and Irrigation day, and a large delegation is expected from this city and this part of the state.

R. S. Dixon will have charge of the Prineville delegation and will lead the braves through the show, each of the number wearing chaps for this occasion.

More valuable publicity has been gained through the exhibits from this part of the state than almost any other and a good sized delegation of this nature will add to the value of the occasion.

Concerning the potato exhibit, the Oregonian said in a recent issue:

"Look here, Mrs. Smith! Those are just the kind I love to bake."

This, and similar ejaculations, with requests for seed, eddied about the prize potatoes at the Manufacturer's and Land Products Show yesterday, when the blue ribbons decorated the champion "spuds" of all Oregon. While the crowds favored all displays with appreciative regard, they confronted the potatoes with mingled evidences of respect and admiration.

Whereas the boss of the Crook County display, which took first on the grand display, first on the general display and four individual first awards for prize potatoes, discussed the manifest superiority of the big "spuds" with a great deal of satisfaction. He is R. L. Schee, of Prineville, and the potato prizewinners were grown by S. D. Mustard, of Powell Butte, near Prineville. The four first individual awards were for Burbank, Early Rose, Hundred Fold and Uncle Sam varieties, with a second award on Netted Gem.

Fine Grains Grown.

Crook County also boasts of the fine showing made by grains and produce grown on the new Ochoco Irrigation Project and is equally proud of the two registered Hereford cows, natives of Crook County, whose stall is an admiration center on the lower floor.

On the closing day of the land show, Mr. Schee has announced, the cows, whose value is in excess of $500, will be given away to the fortunate person who has registered the closest guess of their combined weight. Hundreds of people view the animals daily, and, after much judicial reflection, record their guesses. The cows were raised by George Dickson, of Prineville.

POTATO GROWERS' MEETING AT REDMOND, SATURDAY

An important meeting for all interested in the Deschutes Valley Potato Growers' Association will be held in Redmond, Saturday of this week. At this time the plans for the final reorganization of the association will be decided upon and directors for the ensuing year elected.

The fame of the quality of the Deschutes Valley potato output has been developed largely by the business transacted in standardized potatoes by the association. To continue the reputation for the crop so far attained, it has become necessary to strengthen and enlarge the association to deal in a more businesslike way with the large dealers who are already willing, because of the work of the association in the past to pay a premium for potatoes from Central Oregon. Large dealers as well as the local merchants are practically unanimous in their desire to handle potatoes put out under standard grades by the association.

SWEET CLOVER PAYS

Deschutes Man Reports Big Returns From This Crop

N. W. Gray, owning an irrigated ranch two miles northwest of Deschutes, believes, and with reason, that sweet clover is the ideal crop for the irrigated lands of Deschutes county.

Mr. Gray's arguments are convincing.

They are, in fact, conclusive.

They lie in the value of the crop of sweet clover from a tract of 22 acres which he recently harvested and which will soon be threshed.

Sweet clover is difficult to cut and at the same time save the seed. Through the use of a binder attachment suggested by the Department of Agriculture, to which Mr. Gray made some improvements, he was able to save the greater part of the seed which usually is lost when cut.

The amount saved totaled about three tons, filling 150 best pulp sacks. Mr. Gray offers the crop to anyone who can tell by looking at the shocks if any has fallen out.

A conservative estimate places the total yield of seed at seven tons. Mr. Gray has been offered 19 1/2 cents a pound for the seed from a California buyer, but he has decided, if possible to sell the entire amount in Deschutes county for seed next year. This crop comes from seed that has been acclimated four years from the first sweet clover seed that was brought in here, and that by himself.

The value of the seed plus the value of the straw, of which there will be approximately 90 tons, is about $150 per acre.

In addition to the intrinsic value of the sweet clover as a crop it has a rotation value with potatoes that cannot be equalled. Mr. Gray planted three-quarters of an acre of the turned under clover land in spuds last year and dug 200 sacks of the patch.—Bend Press.
