THE Idaho National Harvester

IS A MACHINE that combines the principle of the header and the thresher. It does the work that it formerly took both these machines to accomplish; cutting, threshing, cleaning and stacking the grain in one action. Only two men are needed to handle it. Eight to twelve horses furnish ample power to operate it under any ordinary conditions. If desired it may be pulled with a tractor. The Harvester cuts a nine-foot swath and has a capacity of from fifteen to eighteen acres per day. The time of the two men, cost of the power, lubricating oil and upkeep are the only items of expense incurred in its use.
