They run wild, simply wild over me; I don't know where it is that they can be. No matter where I'm at, all the cooties, thin or fat, the tall ones the small ones, They run right down my back. Every night, how they fight, over me; I don't know where it is that they can be, Underneath my clothes they lie, When I catch them they will die, They run wild simply wild over me. —N. J. B.
