ANOTHER MILE POST
 With this issue the Journal embarks on its twenty-fourth year. Almost since the first year, it has held the supremacy of the newspaper field in this part of the state, and for the past score of years has fought the fight for the good of the community and nation as we saw it, without mincing words and has championed many if not all of the big developments that have come to this little city and its surrounding country, in many instances being at least something of a factor in bringing about these better things.
 The Journal has made mistakes. More of them in the past five years, under the present management than in all its previous history, and of these we have only this to say: that the Journal has done more for the community, fought a harder and a better fight during this period than ever before.
 We have no apologies and no regrets. We have written a story, passed editorial judgment in the task of getting the news to our readers while it was yet news, and twenty-four hours later have seen an error, a mistaken judgment, but in all cases we have done what we thought best with the information and light at hand.

Every good newspaper is so identified with the life of its community that it puts its own welfare second to a large degree in the fight for the good of its home community. In so doing it aids its own growth indirectly in a great measure.
 This has been done by the Journal in that it has made improvements even ahead of the actual demands to keep pace with the community and it has proved to be a wise policy for in every instance the improvements have soon been justified by an increased demand.
 Looking forward from this point, the great things that are the heritage of this great country seem much nearer achievement than ever before. Some have already been realized, some are now in process of realization and yet other and very large developments are very near.
 The task of those most interested in these things, thus the task of the Journal, is just well begun.
 We have no extravagant promises. We feel that our future may be measured in a degree by our past performances, and will only say that the coming years will find us as they have in the past, doing our very best as we can see it.
 For the patronage and support we have received, and to our growing circle of friends, we say heartily, we thank you.

THE BOND ISSUE
 By a vote of almost 16 to one in Friday's election, the people of Crook county showed their endorsement of the program outlined by the County Court and the State Highway Commission for a system of highways for this county.
 More than that, the overwhelming vote was one of confidence in the Commission and the County Court, and also in Judge Wallace, who has by his untiring personal effort and enthusiastic labor in behalf of the county during his tenure of office, kept the campaign successfully moving to its very satisfactory present status.
 The voters are to be congratulated upon their excellent vote. Their confidence is not misplaced, and the money they have thus expended will return manifold.

THEY ARE OVERLOOKING A BET
 The proposed Oregon sky line highway along the summit of the Cascades can never receive the endorsement of all of the Central Oregon press for it does not connect with Bend at both ends. A serious oversight.

World's Greatest Cataract
 Niagara Falls is not the greatest cataract in the world. The greatest cataract is said to be on the Ignazu river, which partly separates Brazil and Argentina. The precipice over which the river plunges is 210 feet high, that of Niagara being 167 feet. The cataract is 13,123 feet wide, or about two and a half times as wide as Niagara. It is estimated that 100,000,000 tons of water pass over Niagara in one hour. A like estimate gives the falls of Ignazu 140,000,000 tons.

He Who Knows.
 He who knows nothing thinks he can teach others what he has himself just been learning. He who knows much, secretly believes that what he is saying is unknown to others, and consequently speaks with more hesitation.—La Bruyere.

Winter Apples

We have a carload of apples enroute, which will arrive within the next few days. Will have all the better varieties and price will be named on basis of carload purchase. Apples are cheaper in proportion, than other food products and it will pay you to lay in a liberal supply for the winter.

Snakes.
 It is known that some species of serpents lay eggs, as farmers often plow them up, and upon opening them they find the embryo snake within the leathery covering. The eggs of the same species vary in size and shape, but are always oval. As a rule it is the constricting snake, or those which kill their prey by squeezing it, that lay eggs: such as the black snake, boa constrictor, etc.

Useless.
 Next to a silver loving cup our notion of the most useless thing in the world is one of those elaborately jeweled swords they are presenting to returning generals nowadays.

For Instance.
 Other things are as scarce as the teeth of a hen—a rooster's for instance.

A Hard Worker.
 "You have great faith in your congressman," "Seems to me like it's justified," said Mr. Cobble. "Anybody that's as regular about sendin' me free seeds an' all the latest crop reports, not to mention full details about them cave dwellers that used to live out West, with stacks of pamphlets tellin' me how to fight th' boll weevil an' th' skeeter, is on the job even if he ain't no statesman."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The First Cup and Saucer.
 The beverages of the sixteenth century were water, mead, sack and ale. In the middle of the next century tea was introduced, and with it came the Chinese "or china" teacup. The handle of the cup came from Mediterranean lands. Originally it was made of thick and strong earthenware and applied to heavy jars and lamps.

AN OLD STORY

Mr. Merchant, I won't be able to pay my account today. I expect to sell my hay, or I expect to sell some stock, or I expect Mr. Blank will pay me, or I am going to turn my wool or grain and so will straighten up before very long. Will this kind of a story pay a merchants bills, running expenses or buy more stock? The fact that no merchant is able to fill the place of a banker, should be kept in mind, and it is your duty to comply with the terms of his sales.
