TRADE IN OUR TOWN

The only thing in Oregon from which the tax payers derive any benefit without any cost to themselves is good roads, according to Charles Hall of Marshfield, president of the Oregon Chamber of Commerce, referring to the proposed constitutional amendment raising the state bonding limit from two to four per cent, to be voted upon May 21 at the primary election.

"The people of Oregon should make this measure carry unanimously," said Mr. Hall. "Good roads build up the state and the time has come for us to get out of the mud. When the good road movement was started here was only 38,000 automobiles in the state, and now there are 86,000 registered to date.

"Good roads in one community inspire other communities to build them and greater efforts along the lines of advancement should be put in action at once. The automobile license fees and gasoline tax are sufficient to pay interest on and retire any bonds which may be issued under the proposed amendment, and the money from these bonds will match federal aid, of which $2,629,555 remains unclaimed, as all available funds are exhausted by being spent or contracted. In addition, whatever would be apportioned under the proposed bill before Congress, which is sure to result in Oregon having the opportunity to claim more than $5,000,000, would be lost.

"The cost of good roads to a farmer is easy to figure out, but the cost of bad roads to the same individual is hard to determine. A farmer living at Meadow Lake stated that bad roads cost him 50 cents a bushel to haul out his potato crop, which, of course, is ultimately paid by the consumer at his table. Never have the markets paid higher prices, and the farmers want to get their products to market to sell them.

"Oregon had a great influx of people coming to invest and settle down following the Lewis and Clark Exposition, which they had previously visited. Persons passing through Oregon will inquire about the roads, and if they learn that the road building programme has stopped their interest in the state will be greatly diminished if not lost."

Prolific Mesquite Tree.
A historical mesquite tree, cut down in Honolulu, Hawaii, October 23, 1919, which served as a valuable source of seed, and had been a landmark attracting the interest of thousands of tourists traversing the Pacific ocean, had, during the ninety-two years of its existence, been the progenitor of thousands of trees which now cover throughout the Hawaiian island group approximately 90,000 acres of mostly barren land which formerly was worthless.

Memoranda in Glass.
A reader tells us that with the use of gum tragacanth, allowing a week for drying, two sheets of glass can be joined with a sheet of paper between them, without the slightest staining of the paper. It is suggested that this provides a new and useful means of making paper weights and other glass articles with calendars, etc., imbedded in them. The gum, while still wet, appears to have stained the paper; but every trace of this disappears as the drying out proceeds.—Scientific American.

Bath in West Africa.
The Bantu of West Africa makes elaborate preparations for a real soak by digging a hole in the ground, in which he puts seven herbs, a quantity of peppers, cardamom seeds and bushes, then he pours in a lot of boiling hot water. After he gets in a light frame covered with clay is put over the hole to keep in the steam. After hours of steaming the bather emerges and is washed off with clean water, then kneaded by a professional for one hour, when he dons his scanty clothing and goes his way "shivering with cleanliness."

Growth.
Married people should try to learn how to grow towards each other. No human thing, marriage least of all, can be allowed to grow unattended. It takes pains and thought, as well as usefulness, to grow good marriages.—Woman's Magazine.
