CHOP SUEY

Many good things delivered in small packages.

The Usual Way

He worked by day,
And toiled by night,
He gave up play
And all delight.
Dry books he read
New things to learn,
And forged ahead,
Success to earn
He plodded on
With faith and pluck,
And when he won,
Men called it luck.
—Detroit Free Press.

Economy is one thing, stinginess is another. Economy saves from extravagance, purchases wisely and spends money prudently. Stinginess buys cheap things because they cost little, goes without necessities and frequently saves money when it might be spent in such a manner as to bring returns that would increase itself in a short time. Mere money saving is a vice; economy is a virtue.

A Wonderful Thing

Enthusiasm is the dynamics of your personality. Without it, whatever abilities you may have lie dormant. You may possess knowledge, sound judgment good reasoning facilities, but no one will know it until you discover how to put your heart into thought and action. A wonderful thing is this quality which we call enthusiasm. If you would like to be a power among men, cultivate enthusiasm. People will like you better for it; you will escape the dull routine of a mechanical existence and you will make headway wherever you are.—J. Ogden Armour.

Laugh It Off

Are you worsted in a fight,
Laugh it off.
Are you cheated of your right,
Laugh it off.
Don't make tragedies of trifles,
Don't shoot butterflies with rifles—
Laugh it off.

Does your work get into kinks?
Laugh it off.
Are you near all sorts of brinks?
Laugh it off.
If it's sanity your after,
There's no recipe like laughter—
Laugh it off. —Century.

Never Say, "I Can't!"

If you go about with defeat in your face, you are advertising to the world your incapacity, your inability to do what you attempted to do. If you go about among your fellows as though you didn't take much stock in yourself, as though you didn't believe that you could accomplish very much you are already beaten. For, as Marie Corelli says, "If you choose to be no more than clods of clay, then we shall be used as clods of clay for braver feet to tread on."

Constantly assert your superiority, your divinity, your power to succeed. Believe in yourself, your power to succeed. Believe in your self, realize that you were made to dominate your surroundings. Resolve that you will be the master and not the slave of circumstances. Never say "I can't," but always "I can, therefore I will." If to be an egotist is never to be afraid to tackle your job, then be an egotist.

Not Yet.

Don't be discouraged
"Cause the clouds is black;
Sunshine is awaitin'
Foh to travel back.
I've seen rain a-plenty;
Thought 'twould never quit
Thunderin' and lightnin'—
But—

I

ain'
drowned
yet.

How many opportunities are missed by our waiting for them to come to us—the positive factor waiting for the negative! Opportunities are less movable than souls and wills. Why not search for them instead of waiting for them to search for us?

As one lamp lights another nor grows less, so nobleness enkindleth nobleness.—Lowell.

Local Talent

Uncle Ezra—George, where do all them actors live?
George—Why, they live here!
Uncle Ezra—Right here in New York, eh! Well, by heck! They do purty good for local talent!

Things Worth While

The wireless telegraph is fine.
Let all the poets harp it;
But wouldn't it be just divine,
To have a beatless carpet?

—Youngtown telegraph.
A beatless carpet would be great—
In fact, you've made a dandy wish
But wouldn't it be just divine,
To really find a boneless fish?

—Geneva Free Press-Times
No doubt these blessings would be fine,
And greatly swell the nations bliss
But scientists of late opine
That what we need is a germless kiss.

—Birmingham Age-Herald
The germless kiss, the boneless fish,
The beatless carpet all are fine;
But listen to this soulful wine—
A songless cabaret for mine.

—Springfield Union
The beatless carpet the germless kiss,
The songless cabaret's your dope,
But for the height of human bliss
The smell-less onion is my hope.

—Yonkers Statesman
The smell-less onion, germless kiss,
And beatless carpets may be fine;
But for my dream of human bliss
The endless bank account for mine.

—Detroit Free Press
The less-less things you fellows note,
Would all be fine to have, by jings
But I must have to save my goat,
Some stringless ukelele things.

—Houston Post.
The bony fish, the germie kiss,
And all the rest, I, too, abhor;
But of all things I ask but this:
A friendly, kindly, bloodless war.

—Toledo Blade.
The beatless carpet, bloodless war,
Are sorely needed, we'll concede,
There's just one thing we're pining for
And that's some weedless garden seed.

—Kansas City Star.
Expected Too Much

A noted New York architect said of a recent criticism to skyscrapers: "The criticism is not fair. It is prejudiced. Hence it will do more harm than good—like the remark to the waiter."

"To a waiter who was under notice to leave, a guest said in a restaurant: "Waiter, confound it! This steak isn't tender enough!"

"Not tender enough," the waiter snarled. "Ah, what do you expect? Do you want it to jump up and hug and kiss you?"

One Wife Is Safer

A woman missionary in China was taking tea with a mandarin's eight wives. The Chinese ladies examined her clothing, her hair, her teeth, and so on, but her feet, especially amazed them. "Why," cried one, "You can walk and run as well as a man!" "Yes, to be sure," said the missionary. "Can you ride a horse, and swim, too?" "Yes," "Then you must be strong as a man!" "I am," "And you wouldn't let a man beat you—not even if he was your husband—would you?" "Indeed, I wouldn't," the missionary said. The mandarin's eight wives looked at each other, nodding their heads. Then the oldest said softly: "Now I understand why the foreign devil never has more than one wife. He is afraid."

Out Of Gratitude

Things went wrong for Johnny the other morning and he was so cross that his father was compelled to punish him. Some time after the affair between him and the head of the family was over his mother found him out by the barn lavishing caresses and endearing terms on an old ram that was kept in the pasture there. The tenderness displayed by the youngster touched her and after watching him lovingly for a little while she approached him and said: "My little boy is very kind and good to the old sheep. Why?"

Without stopping to look up he replied, as a stifled sob shook his frame: "He just butted pa over. That's why I like him."
