CHRISTMAS
Christmas is the season when everyone should halt and consider some deed of cheer for his fellow citizens, or strive in some manner to make the world a better place in which to live.

It is likewise the season when the community and the individual should take stock of the year that is to come.

This particular part of the best state in the best nation on earth has a number of things that may be considered community Christmas gifts.

First and perhaps most important is the announcement of the fact that we are to have the Benham Falls project built by federal money.

All of our effort to secure irrigation, irrigation congress meetings, and like gatherings, the construction of systems by the use of private capital, some semi-private capital, while this state has been paying into the federal reclamation fund large sums of money and receiving little or no benefits in return, these have been of less importance than the one announcement that the Benham Falls project is approved by the government, is selected for the big development that is due Oregon, and that the work is to start in 1921.

Vast tracts of land that are but a liability to the county and the nation, thousands upon thousands of acres that have but brought ruin to every man who has been enterprising enough to attempt the task of dry farming with the application of water will bring happy homes and much taxable wealth to the community, the state and nation.

These, then, are a part of the Christmas gifts to Central Oregon, of which Prineville is the center.

We might enumerate more things, as a system of state highways radiating from Prineville as the spokes from a wheel, but enough for this time.

Just now it is being brought very forcefully to our attention that all over this world of ours there are innocent children starving to death, in want of the necessities that we Americans in our self-satisfied lives take for granted as necessary. If we feel that this is the best country in the world, and we do, it should be easy for us to forego some of our little smug luxuries, so that the little children who are holding out their arms to us for assistance in their days of need may not be disappointed.

ROOM FOR MORE ON OCHOCHO PROJECT.

One hundred families can be placed on 40 to 50 acre tracts of land in the Ochocho project in Central Oregon, according to information received today from Prineville by the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce. This land is all irrigated, in cultivation and ready for settlement, according to the message.

Diversified farming, such as dairying, hog raising, sugar beet raising and truck farming is possible on the Ochocho lands, which are said to be the cheapest irrigated obtainable in the state. The price averages $75 an acre.

The message says that wells are obtainable at an average depth of 35 feet and that none of the project land is more than six miles from a shipping point, and that yields per acre of six tons of alfalfa, 110 bushels of oats, 75 bushels of barley and 60 bushels of wheat have been made.

The above appeared in the Portland Journal of Monday, and goes to show that Prineville and her projects is rapidly getting on the map. The Telegram had an article similar to the one reprinted in its issue of Monday.

Wasted Strength.
Samson is not the only man who has trifled with his strength until it was gone; not only the one who has wasted it in vain and useless ways, believing in his heart that he might trifle with it as he willed, and still not lose it. Many another from some prison house of weakness looks back at his own folly in wonder.
