Dry Land Below Sea Level.
All the continents except South America have areas of dry land below sea level, the lowest being in Palestine, where there is a point in the Dead sea basin 1,200 feet lower than the Mediterranean.

True Greatness.
A man's true greatness lies in the consciousness of his highest purpose of life, founded on a just estimate of himself and everything else, and a steady obedience to the rule which he knows to be right.—George Long.

Dreaded Element of Which He Sang.
Edvard Grieg, the Norwegian composer, who wrote of the Vikings and the great ocean, who sang, "And it was Olaf Trygvesson and he sailed the north sea wide"—Grieg would never enter a boat because it made him, deathly ill. Although money was a badly needed asset in the Grieg household, all the contracts at fabulous prices which American managers offered him were refused, because a boat ride would have killed the ocean-musician.—Charles D. Isaacson in Hearst's Magazine.

STREETS ONLY BY COURTESY

Roadways in European Cities Unpaved and Filthy Up to Comparatively Few Years Ago.

The oldest pavement of which there is any record in modern cities is that of Cordova, Spain, which was paved with stones by the Moors in the middle of the ninth century. Modern travelers think the original pavement cannot have been replaced, it is so bad. The Moors also caused water to be conveyed to the city in leaden pipes.

Paris was the next city to pave its streets; but this civic betterment did not take place until the year 1184, on which occasion an historian says, "the name of the city was changed from Lutetia, which it had been previously called on account of its filthiness."

Those old streets must have been very bad indeed, as it was the general practice of the citizens to keep swine, which roamed at large and wallowed in the mire of the public ways.

The streets of London were unpaved in the eleventh century, and it is uncertain just when the work did begin. Holborn was not paved until 1417, though it was frequently impassable from the depth of its mud.

Berlin allowed its streets to go without even a clearing or cleaning until the middle of the seventeenth century, and until 1861 it was a popular practice to place pig pens immediately beneath the front windows of the houses.

Every kind of filth and dirt was thrown into the streets of Warsaw up to the comparatively recent year of 1823.—Stray Stories.
