THE OUTLOOK

A Washington news dispatch says:
"The cut in federal reserve bank interest rates, announced within the week at such widely separated centers as New York, Atlanta and Chicago, comes to American industries with all the cheer of a burst of sunshine after a storm."

"A lively quickening of business which even the most casual observers cannot have failed to note, has been the immediate result. The outlook today is the brightest since the armistice was signed."

The credit situation is described as a great deal better than a year ago, and money easier than at any time for months. An avalanche of gold is sweeping down on America from every quarter. The government's strong boxes are declared to be at the bursting point.

Values of securities on the New York stock market are higher, and the volume of trading is increased. Whether Wall Street actually senses an improved situation or not, its tone and its action are evidence of its belief in improved conditions.

America has more than one third of the gold in the world, and the other nations could not, with the remaining two thirds, pay the debts they owe us. The deposits in American savings banks have risen to six and one half billions against three billions before the war. The banking resources of the United States are far beyond anything ever known in the world.

America is the one nation on earth that is in a position to manufacture things at 100 per cent capacity, and the one nation that is comparatively free from heretical problems in industrial disputes.

The world has been at a standstill in construction for half a dozen years and the United States is the only nation with plants and workers capable of meeting the demands for building and structural enterprise. Settlement of world conditions is the thing that stands most in the way toward the reconstruction necessary after so long a period of non-construction and years of unexampled destruction.

The decline in interest rates as recognized by lowered discount rates in the federal reserve banks is scarcely the beginning of the decline of such rates certain to come. The money used in the last two or three years in extravagance and speculation at colossal rates, is no longer required in that field. The huge sums employed in hoarding by profiteers who sought and much time held control of the markets, is largely liberated because of the deflation in prices. The late stagnation at industrial plants through fear of the future and by reason of cancelled orders threw more money in idleness.

Money will not remain in idleness. Its owners want it to work and they will presently be seeking borrowers. Then the decline in interest rates will go to a maximum and the sequel will be the effort of money to earn a profit thru investment in productive enterprise of every description. It is impossible for the United States in our plenty of cash, credit and resources to continue to do other than advance into a growing activity.

A better feeling will spread over the country as the trend of the Harding administration toward efforts to stabilize Europe becomes more marked. The better feeling described in the above news dispatch is undoubtedly in part due to a growing belief that Hughes and Hoover are gradually leading President Harding into plans for throwing the influence of the United States on the Merchants are more and more realizing that the old days of excessive profits are a thing of the past and that people are going to buy where they get value received. Although there is no opportunity to examine an article and thus judge correctly as to its quality when dealing with mail order houses, yet the lower price often found is the bait which brings them customers. The Inland Auto Company of this city has taken the pains to examine and tear apart a number of these supposed bargains from among the lines which they handle, and their window display clearly explains the false economy of securing a much inferior article in order to affect a small saving in the purchase price.

WHAT NEXT
All over the country thousands of boys and girls are finishing High School and Grade School. This chapter of life is being closed. The question, "What Next?" must soon be faced.

Up to this time decisions largely have been made for these young people. Now they must weigh the matter and think for themselves. Much depends upon which road is taken now or in September.

Daily we meet people who say, "If I had only finished High School, or 'Why didn't I realize the value of a college education?' Gone are the days when a sixth grade schooling armed a man or woman to cope with business conditions. To be sure, we all know folks highly successful in business in spite of the lack of book learning, but think of the greater success they might have had if they possessed the advantage of a thoroughly trained mind.

So to every boy and girl we say, if possible, continue your education. If breadwinning is a necessity right away, accept the work at hand cheerfully and work and study hard in the Great School of Experience. Many paths are open to the young folks of today. There is enough about any work to learn to become an expert in that line and the expert is the man who gets pleasure out of work as well as big pay.
Don't stop school until you have to.—Ex.

DECORATION DAY
The ceremony of placing flowers and flags, of holding Memorial Services is only an outward sign of the honor we do our soldiers. It is but a sign of the reverence of our hearts. It is one of the important days of the entire year. No other carries the lesson of patriotism and sacrifice for country so strongly. If all boys and girls are taught the true meaning of Memorial Day, and that it is a privilege to take part reverently in the exercises of the day, there will be no problem of Americanization as far as these youngsters are concerned.—Ex.

Men who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than men who try to do nothing and succeed.

GOOD TIME GIVEN BURNS VISITORS AT DANCE
The dance given for the Burns High School on Thursday night was quite a social event, aiding considerably in getting the Burns students and the local students acquainted. There was a good sized crowd in attendance. The music was furnished by the Johnson Creek Orchestra and the organization can now be considered as a standby of the town.

The visitors were shown as good a time as could be given them under the circumstances and they all seemed to be well pleased with Prineville even if their baseball team did suffer defeat in both games.
