

ELECTION ON TUESDAY FOR STATE MEASURES

Ballots and other election paraphernalia are being distributed this week by Asa W. Battles, County Clerk for the election which will be held throughout the country on Tuesday next. The usual voting hours will be observed, and the ballot contains but five measures, all passed by the recent legislature, and referred to the people for confirmation.

IRRIGATORS BALL HILARIOUS AFFAIR

One of the most sensational dances ever given in Prineville was staged at the Legion Hall Friday night, when King Alfalfa and his royal coterie sponsored the first ball to be given by the Crook County Irrigators. They officially proclaimed Mrs. Harold Baldwin queen of the domain.

The music was there, the crowd was there, and when the dance was over, King Alfalfa and his followers were the last to go home.

A booth constructed of baled hay was arranged at the entrance, where the irrigators stationed some of their number to collect the admission to the dance and also to sell badges of the Crook County Irrigators. The ball room was attractively decorated with penants, bales of hay and sage. The hay was used in the place of chairs. The best part of all was the corner fixed up to represent a bar, back of which John Ross was the official dispenser of the irrigators' cocktail. The Johnson Creek Orchestra provided the class of music that brings them all to the floor, both young and old. A platform was arranged for the orchestra in the center of the floor. It was decorated with sage and willows on each corner and the tops were gathered together with four lights clustered in the center of the bower thus formed. No efforts were spared by King Alfalfa in the decorations and the climax was reached in the erection of the queen's throne. The stage was used for this purpose and the throne itself was made of bales of hay upon which were placed cream cans and products of the irrigated lands. Juniper trees were placed behind and around the throne while in front a border of sage was constructed, overtopped with early potatoes stuck on pitchforks.

The irrigators wore their official uniform, blue demins, jumpers and straw hats.

Nominations for queen were made during the dance. The arrangement being that the person receiving the highest number of votes would be considered the choice for queen and the next two highest would be the Maids of Honor. The votes were sold at ten cents each. Competition was keen and each candidate was equipped with a quota of efficient electioneers. Mrs. Harold Baldwin received the largest number, while Mrs. Henry Howard and Mrs. Sam Ganger were selected as Maids of Honor.

The coronation ceremony was duly performed, Jay H. Upton as Prince Water Rights escorted the queen to her throne, and the Maids were conducted to their seats at the foot of the throne by the Duke of Ochoco and General Sage Brush.

After the ceremony, the dance was continued. Supper was served in the Club Rooms on the first floor.

The prizes given away were a five pound box of candy to Mrs. Homer Norton of Post, for the woman coming the farthest distance to attend the dance, which was twenty-seven miles; and a box of cigars to Melvin Weberg of Suplee, who traveled 83 miles to attend the dance, thus being the man who traveled farthest to dance.

THE BIG FISH FRY PULLED OFF AT VANORA

Part of the Journal force attended the big annual fish fry at Vanora which took place last Sunday. We had often been told of the fun to be had at these big feasts, but had not the remotest idea of just what a real fish fry was.

We arrived early, being the fifth car to go down the long grade, and made ourselves comfortable under the fruit trees near the old mill site. Naturally we were on the lookout for the long strings of trout which were to supply the main part of the much talked of banquet, but saw nothing in that line for some time. Shortly after our arrival cars from all over began to put in an appearance, and by noon there were 136 autos parked in the level glade adjoining the orchard. Among the cars to arrive was one light truck from Madras with the fish for the occasion. 1,800 trout comprised the load, and they were all cleaned and covered with crushed ice. These fish, we were told, were all caught by the local fishermen of Madras, the bait used being artificial flies. They ranged in size from ten inches up to eighteen or twenty inches and we want to here state that 1,800 trout all in one pile is a proposition to big to be fully realized without actually viewing them. They were piled out in great mounds on two long tables, preparatory to being placed on the hot plate for frying. The stove used for the cooking of this great mass of trout was a large brick-walled affair with a steel top three feet wide by five feet long. When this large top was gotten to just the right heat, it was flooded with grease and then covered entirely with fish.

Messrs. Howard W. Turner and Austin W. Culp acted as chefs for the occasion, and the way they turned raw material into beautifully browned food was a revelation to us. Each of these gentlemen were armed with hot-plate turners, and they worked with a system that made for speed. While one was dishing out fried fish to the long line of waiting guests, the other was turning the long rows of trout to keep them from burning and at the same time piling on more fish. The range top was entirely covered with trout for fully two and a half hours. In addition to trout another range, under the able management of Perry Read was kept busy boiling coffee and keeping the chili beans hot.

There were over 700 people present and all seemed to be out for a great big time, and if they didn't have said good time they sure had no one to blame but themselves. This was our first fish fry, but if we live and are within driving distance of Vanora next year it will not be our last one.

This fry is an annual occasion put on by the Madras Rod and Gun Club, this being the eighth annual Fish Fry. We feel that special mention is due to Howard W. Turner, Austin W. Culp and Lewis H. Irving of Madras, also to several other people whose names we were unable to learn, for their efforts in seeing that all present enjoyed themselves, and we feel safe in saying the Messrs. Turner and Culp were the most of Oregon on that day. We believe that the Rod and Gun Club should award them not only a rousing vote of thanks, but also a fitting medal for their labors. They are gentlemen whom it is a privilege to come in contact with.

MORE LIQUOR CONFISCATED

Thursday morning, May 26th, city marshal John Fincher and Deputy Sheriff Dave Jones made a raid on the Ochoco Rooming house operated by Mrs. R. E. Jones.

A number of bottles of moonshine were found. In one of the rooms three pint bottles containing liquor were found, and in the woodshed two full quart bottles and one partly emptied were found. Mrs. Jones was placed under arrest at once, but denied any knowledge of the liquor in the house and was released by Justice of the Peace E. O. Hyde, before whom the case was brought to trial.

A short time later, Pete Britton acknowledged ownership of the liquor in the woodshed and in his trial was fined $100 in the city court and $50 in the County court. Later it was discovered that Mark Holdridge was the person to whom the moonshine in the room belonged. In his trial he was fined $100 by the city court.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Out where the birds sing a little sweeter,
Out where the trout bite a little nearer,
That's where the West begins.
Out where the neighbors treat you whiter,
Where the flowers that bloom are a little brighter,
Where the cares of life are a little lighter,
That's where the West begins.

Out on the banks of Crooked river
Stands a little city as in a quiver.
That's where the West begins,
Out where the coyotes thrill in the gloaming,
Where the ground hogs are playfully roaming,
Where the deer and birds are joyfully homing,
That's where the West begins.

Out where the kine are a little rounder,
Out where the swine weigh another pounder,
That's where the West begins.
Out where the Ochoco foams and tumbles,
There's where the hay rolls up in bundles,
Out where your worries fall in crumbles,
That's where the West begins.
