THE IRRIGATORS TOOK PORTLAND BY STORM
(By Bob Osborne)

Portland, Ore., June 13.—Crook County irrigators certainly made one big hit in this town during the Festival. I "was looking for you" but I didn't bargain for the whole county.

Art O'Neil and I were in the Portland Hotel the first of the week when an uproar from the banquet room ending with "That's where the Alfalfa grows" made our mouths water and in we tramped to find some overalled chaps from Crook county whooping it up. They didn't slow down a bit during the days they were here and many were the street corner remarks I heard about "them irrigators from Prineville."

I am sorry that I didn't get to follow up the bunch a little closer, but the entry of a float in the parade by our Association kept me busy. I expect that a lot of things happened in a funny way that would be good to hand out to the bunch, but no doubt they will be told by the main actors. Although "Doc" Rosenberg is a member of the State Board of Health, next door, I feel that I should say a word about the scandalous way he capered about during the parade. I saw the show from the tenth story of the Selling building and all the way down sixth street I could see that bald spot on "Doc's" head gyrating around from one side of the street to the other—never missing the prettiest ladies. The way some of those Alfalfa Kings disported themselves led one to believe that perhaps the shovels they carried had hollow handles for liquid not commonly used to irrigate alfalfa.

Crook County received excellent publicity from the visit to Portland of the Irrigators. Make it big for Portland 1925!

This is Farmer's week at O. A. C. and I am to be there to hold a free tuberculosis clinic for the Oregon Association. These clinics are proving to be one of the best possible methods not only for discovering and aiding patients, but also to educate the public in the proper safeguards against the disease.

It took three months to make a soldier during the war. How long does it take to make a society for out of an honest old farmer? If the question suggests humorous possibilities to you go to the Lyric Theatre next Wednesday where Society Secrets is the principal attraction and get a dramatic thrill with your laughs. The story of Society Secrets gives Eva Novak her greatest starring opportunity. It was directed by Leo McCarey from the magazine story by Helen Christine Bennett.

SUFFERS PAINFUL INJURIES

E. Elliott was painfully injured Saturday, when his team became frightened, and threw him from the wagon on the road south of Peal.

In addition to a number of painful body bruises, his lower lip was torn down almost to the end of his chin, which made a number of stitches necessary. He was brought to Prineville and given treatment by Dr. Belknap and is recovering rapidly.

LAUGHABLE COMEDY COMING TO LYRIC

When "Once a Plumber—" comes to the Lyric Theatre on Saturday, Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will be seen in the overalls of honest toil. They are two plumbers who are anxious to find a quicker way to get rich than by plumbing (if that is possible). They think they find it when they are elected president and secretary of a copper mining company. They find that the duties of the president and secretary consist of wearing jazzy clothes, drinking lots of gin rickeys, and being vamped by a duo of pleasing experts.

A little later detectives arrive and the plumbers find that another of their duties is to be the goats for the fraudulent promoters of the fake company. Instead of finding a quick way to get in a palace, they find a quick way to get into jail.

Once a Plumber—, is Lyons and Moran's third big comedy feature for Universal. Like the first one, Everything but the truth, it was written by Edgar Franklin. The scenario is by C. B. Hoadly, while Lyons and Moran are their own directors.

The comedy team have four pulchritudinous leading ladies in the delectable persons of Lillian Hackett, Edna Mae Wilson, Jane Elliott and Ethel Ritchie. Important comedy parts are played by George G. Wilson, Sidney Deane and Jeff Osborne.

ANIMALS AS ACTORS IN FEATURE PHOTOPLAY

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone," Vitagraphs screen version of the popular novel by James Oliver Curwood, which will be shown at the Lyric theatre on Thursday and Friday is a clean, live story of love and adventure in the frozen wildness of the great Canadian Northwest. Not the least of its exciting episodes, aside from a great fight between two grizzly bears, are the scenes, which were difficult to obtain, where David Raine and Marge O'Doone, with the aid of Tara, the trained bear, and Borree, the wolf-dog, fight their way out of the Nest, the stronghold of smugglers and bad men.

The play opens on a train stalled in the snow of an arctic night and ends with a night encampment and a strange meeting far from civilization. Between the beginning and the end are wonderful adventures and exciting incidents in a land where heroism and danger are a part of the daily routine.
