OIL PUMP FIXED ON AUTOMOBILE ENGINE

Prevents Clogging and Burned-Out Bearings.

Illustration Shows Plan for Arranging Force-Feed Oiling System at Small Expense—Operated by One of the Cams.

On an automobile engine which was oiled by the "splash" system, it was found that the tube which conducted the oil from the flywheel to the front part of the engine became clogged, and some burned-out bearings resulted. To prevent the recurrence of this accident, a pump was installed in the oil line and connected to be driven by the cam shaft, as shown in the sketch. The upper part of the motor crank case, on the camshaft side, was drilled out and tapped opposite one of the cams, to take a brass tube, which was threaded with a standard pipe thread. This tube was reamed out to a snug fit for a small piece of shafting, which formed the plunger of the pump. Another piece of tubing was screwed onto the first at right angles, and to the ends of it, through two ball-check valves, were attached the oil tubes leading to the crank case and to the bearings of the engine. These check valves acted to prevent oil from flowing back to the crank case, while permitting it to flow in the proper direction. On the end of the plunger was fastened a striking plate of hard steel, against which the cam pushed once during every revolution of the cam shaft. In this way the engine was provided with a force-feed oiling system at small expense.—G. A. Luers, Washington, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE PAINTS

The total automobile revenue for 1921 in New York state is estimated at $11,000,000.

For the first time six-wheeled motor omnibuses have recently been placed on the highways of Paris for passenger traffic.

During the six months, April to September, 1920, there were 7,498 motor vehicles, valued at $10,000,000, imported into India.

To relieve the traffic congestion in the center of the city of Philadelphia, all left-hand turns in the business district are prohibited.

While the United States has one automobile for every 14 inhabitants, England has one for 150 inhabitants, and France one for 198.

According to estimates, one-fourth of an American citizen's income is the trusted means to spend on the upkeep of a passenger automobile.

Superstitious Montenegrins.

The daily life of the Montenegrin peasant is full of superstition. He is superstitious about the manner in which he rises in the morning, about what first meets his sight, how he dresses and washes, and whom he meets, of what food he eats, and the time and manner of serving throughout the entire day.
