THE TOWN OF THE HORRIBLE EXAMPLE

During the month the State Editorial Association is coming to Central Oregon for its annual convention, the meeting place being at Bend this year.

There is no better place in the state for this meeting, and we are sure that the scribes will have the time of their lives as guests of the mill city, with side trips for fishing, camping in the Cascades, and swimming in the lakes.

Many no doubt will bring equipment to camp for some time and will start from that point following the meeting.

Then, there are other advantages of the meeting place for just this group of men. Not the least of these is the opportunity to study, in its native habitat, one of the most unique of the newspaper species.

Since Benj. Franklin founded the Post, there has been no greater example of newspaper freak than one now at large in Bend. Every newspaper has its difficulties in keeping error from its columns, and the best papers have misspelled words and other typographical errors all too frequently these days but for a sheet that can be depended upon for this sort of thing, among the fraternity of the state, there is none better than one printed in Bend, and it is but fair that we say here that we do not refer to the Bulletin.

In a recent issue the paper referred to carried a story in which the name of a prominent business man appeared four times, and each time spelled in a different way. It is but a fair inference to gather that had the name appeared a dozen times, there would have been that many versions of the correct spelling of it.

Every issue is much the same, however, and pi lines, transpositions of slugs as well as letters in words are as conspicuous on every page of the sheet, practically every week, as well as a band of Powell Butte sheep grazing on Willite pavement in Bend. Truly, the scribes are to be guests in the home town of Oregon's "Horrible Example."

A MODERN HIGHWAY APOSTLE

We have had the pleasure this week of a visit of one of the progressive men of Oregon, and one who has done much toward the highway development of the eastern half of the state, R. A. Ford of John Day.

Mr. Ford was for years a resident of this county, having been school superintendent of the county before it was divided "like Gaul, into three parts."

When he first moved into the John Day Valley, Mr. Ford preached a modern highway up that river from his mouth.

He was alone, in his effort at first, but the meeting of the state highway commission this week voted to complete the John Day highway, past the front of the Ford home at Dayville, and during the year the water grade from the Columbia to John Day will be an accomplished fact.

Another matter of note, and one that is not generally known, is the fact that Mr. Ford was present at the drafting of the original highway map of the state in about 1917, and it was largely through his effort at that time that Prineville received its only highway on the original map, the Eugene-Mitchell highway as it was then called.

The state needs more men like R. A. Ford, men who have a vision, and stamina enough to fight for its realization.

Resigned the Vice Presidency. The only vice president to resign was John C. Calhoun, who gave up the vice presidency to become a United States senator.

Entirely Too Much. "It is terrible what I spent during the entertainments for charity," declared Mrs. Newrich. "Two thousand for my dress and five hundred for my coat, besides the twenty for my charity contributions. It is too much."

Right Use of Society. It is not rejection of society, but wise and right use of it, which characterizes the man who lives most richly in the things of the mind.—Hamilton Wright Mable.

Expertly Classified. Beatrice, who has three sisters and one brother a regular little rascal, when asked "How many children are there in your family, dear?" replied, "Four children and one boy."

Fortunes Left to Pets. Sometimes cats fare very well as beneficiaries under wills. It was a Parisian woman, a few years ago, who left 10,000 francs to her cat. On its death the money was to be spent on elementary schools. The feline has since died and the money distributed according to directions. In numerous instances fortunes have been left to found homes for cats and dogs. Sometimes these wills have been dictated by love of animals, while in others they have been written merely for the purpose of "getting even" with grasping relatives.
