EXPERIMENTING

IN this country the plan of cooperative colonies is yet in an experimental stage-with a strong balance against success. Other countries have tried the co-operit was a fine salve for healing the wounds between labor and capital. Yet those successful experiments were where the schemes were perfected and executed by those who esteemed philanthropy above personal financial gains; by men and women who placed the betterment of humanity above the betterment of the private purse.

Much has been said of late concerning an undertaking along co-operative lines of such magnitude a series of conditions rendering permanent peace between all classes of people-in short, to place the prophecy of Edward Bellamy as an actual fact-not an ideal contemplation. If all this can be done the people will cry "Amen! and Amen!!', but, if all promises thus far made shall be carried to completion, the world will wait in patience to view the project in 1915.

For a time these plans of colonization and equal-division provethe American people are so eager the clusive dollar that Portland.

The wise man believes in printer's ink and practically shows an appreciation of a paper battling for the welfare of his home town.

Here in Saint Johns matters are different. Every man in the city running a business of sufficient importance to make a showing is a steady patron of THE REVIEW columns. It is a fine thing to be in a community where every man be-posters till there'll not be enough newspaper.

He who glances through the columns of THE REVIEW will see what lines of business are represented in the city. A New Condition.

George Packingham had a queer xperience going into Portland last Saturday. The car was crowded at Piedmont, and, although Mr. Packingham had paid his fare and gotten a transfer, he left the car and boarded a U. Of course the conductor demanded a fare: the passenger kicked. He didn't blame the conductor, because he was obeying orders; so he paid his fare and went to the Consolidated headquarters and explained the conditions. The officials took the matter under advisement and promise that some action shall be taken to handle such cases and ease the congested condition of in-going cars.

Owing to the delay in the shipment of machinery promised to the Water Company by the manufacturers in the early part of the season the Water Company is laboring under very great disad-vantages, and is taxing its present machinery to its utmost capacity in endeavoring to supply the town with water. The water consumers are therefore requested to economize as much as possible in the use of water for the mutual benefit of all concerned until the new machinery can be received and installed.
