To Be Used On The Weyerhaeuser Tract For Car Shops.

Ostensibly purchased for a site for immense lumber mills lie the 100 acres adjacent to and within the city of St. Johns with its 4600 feet of water front. To the first purchase of 65 acres was added 35 acres—a fact which brought out the query "What will a lumber mill need of a one-hundred-acre site?" and people began to surmise that there was more than a lumber mill in prospect.

A little later it was remembered that Frederick Weyerhaeuser had once purchased 200 acres at Vancouver whereon to erect a big lumber plant—but later on sold it to the Northern Pacific railway—of which he is one of the directors. And it was for this same railway that Weyerhaeuser made this purchase of 100 acres.

Here at St. Johns will be the Pacific terminus of this great railway system. Here will be the car-shops, the repair shops, the engine-building shops, and all their terminals—while the passenger terminal will be pushed across the Willamette on a bridge 175 high and end in Portland.

Renewed vigor will now be shown in this city because this complete deal has been made public—and there will be a host of homes spring up. The erection of all the contemplated buildings will require a large force of men—and these men must be cared for: many will make their homes here in St. Johns; and the city may safely figure on a considerable growth. There will be between twenty millions and thirty millions of brick used in the shops to be erected—and everything will team with activity. Before this work is well under way there will be another electric railway entering St. Johns from the west—crossing the river at this point and pushing on to the Washington line. And all this means business.

Need Fire Limits.

City Engineer W. W. Goodrich is now anxious that fire limits be created by ordinance within the city of St. Johns. Mr. Goodrich believes such limits should be the blocks bounded by Fessenden, Jersey, Hayes and Richmond streets, and if such a plan is adopted a better class of buildings will be erected and insurance rates will be lowered.

Will Build a Home.

George Hall, the tonsorial manipulator, has at last concluded to build a pretty five-room cottage, corner of Jersey and Richmond streets. George declares it is the prettiest building site in St. Johns. It will be a two-story building—and Crook & Walton have the contract to complete it as soon as possible.

New Store.

E. H. Magoon, whom everybody in St. Johns knows as the former proprietor of The Hazelwood, has opened a second hand furniture store in the store room adjoining his old place of business. All wishing to buy furniture of any kind will save money by placing an order with him.

FILE LIBEL CHARGES

St. Johns Town Troubles Up To District Attorney.

SEEKING AN INDICTMENT.

Mayor King and Councilman Peterson Give Evidence—Want Councilman J. H. Black Indicted on Libel.

The quarrel between residents of St. Johns, Mayor King and members of the council of that place regarding the granting of a license for a saloon has reached the district attorney's office, and Mr. Manning is now investigating a charge of criminal libel preferred by Mayor King and Councilman Peterson against Joseph H. Black. Mr. Black is alleged to have stated that Mayor King said if he could get Councilman J. H. Shields to resign his seat the license for a saloon would be granted. Black is further alleged to have made the statement that Mayor King said in the presence of others that a certain amount of money would be given if Shields could be gotten out of office, and this statement was said to have been made in the presence of City Recorder Hanks, and further that Councilman Peterson had arranged to be a silent partner with Tom Cochran in a saloon if the license was secured.

Black is also alleged to have stated that Mr. Leggett asserted that these charges were true. Mayor King and Councilman Peterson pronounce all these charges as false, and want District Attorney Manning to indict those guilty of circulating such stories.

McGARRY TO BAT!

Two Strikes On Him, But He's Now Waiting For A Fair Ball.

Late last evening C. D. Edwards called at The Review office, submitted the following letter, and asked that it be published.

PORTLAND, Sept. 12, 1905. HON. OGLESBY YOUNG:

Dear Sir—In this morning's Oregonian you are reported to have said: "We shall commence quo warranto proceedings to oust Edwards from the council unless we can come to an agreement to have it submitted on a statement of agreed facts."

You are also reported to have said that the parties I represent were "making a settlement very remote by refusing to submit the matter to the decision of the Circuit court as proposed."

Last week I wrote you and Mr. Vaughn consenting to take the matter into court. I also agreed to meet you and settle the facts. How you can construe the overtone on my part into a "refusal to submit to the decision of the Circuit court," when, so far, you have neither answered my letter, nor phoned me, nor in any manner signified your willingness to settle the facts, is beyond me.

You have advised your clients, (a) that an alderman who tenders his resignation in this state has no right to withdraw it before being accepted by proper authority and (b) that the sale of his property does ipso facto create a vacancy in the office.

Now, in order to relieve you from any embarrassment, I will give you this, viz: If you will submit to me a single authority in point I will recommend Mr. Edwards to step out.

You either have this authority or you have not. If you have, the matter is settled. If you have not, I shall not sympathize with the too manifest credulity of your enterprising clients. Very truly yours, WM. R. McGARRY.

EXAMINE WATER.

Mayor King and Councilman Lindquist Drink Some Water.

To satisfy some of those who find fault with the quantity and the quality of water furnished consumers in St. Johns Messrs. King and Lindquist went to the tank early last Friday morning to see if anything could be discovered which should provoke criticism.

They climbed to the top of the tank and investigated the affair as closely as it was possible to do. Each of the men was anxious to find some place where they could kick—because, as city officials, they have been forced to have many kicks registered against them on account of this same water, and if these kicks were well-grounded they desired to know it.

In the tank there was not over a foot of water—as it was early morning and the supply was low. On the surface there was no scum nor oil nor foreign substance of any sort so far as the investigators could see; nor was there any sediment discerned on the bottom of the tank. So far as those investigating the matter could determine the water seemed of the best—and no deleterious substances could be found.

Messrs. King and Lindquist then took a look at the reservoir—about which there has been some fault found. It has been stated that this water here stored gave an unpleasant odor—in other words that "it stunk awfully." It has also been stated that a green scum was to be found on the surface—and that it was not fit to drink.

Messrs. King and Lindquist found several feet of water in this reservoir—and found such sediment as would be natural in an uncovered receptacle where dust could enter. There was nothing else visible—and there was found not a particle of scum, nor did they find any offensive odor. Both men took cups and drank of the water and found no taste at which they could complain; and they seem satisfied that the water company is doing its best to furnish its patrons pure water.

It might be added right here that the water in the reservoir is not intended for domestic consumption—but for purposes of fire protection on the riverfront. There are gates which prevent this water running in the domestic pipes (which are supplied from the tank as are the balance of the mains) the reservoir being constructed merely as a holder of reserve water.

The opinion rendered in this water case is the honest conclusion of the mayor and a councilman who are not in the employ of the water company—and THE REVIEW gives space to it that the people may know. They report only upon the quality—nothing being said as to quantity.

Some complain that, although dwelling close to the tank, their supply is weak—but that condition exists in many portions of Portland at seasons of the year when much water is used and more is wasted. Then there are accidents which may occur to the mains or to the pumps (one happened a few months since) over which no human has control—and these frequently cause much complaint among patrons who do not investigate the cause.

Manager Scott, of the water company, states he does not desire any misrepresentation in the matter of service. Steps are being constantly taken to make all points better: dead ends are being arranged so as to admit of flushing, and he believes with the new machinery installed the service is being made the superior of many districts in Portland—in fact, numerous cases can be named where this city is far ahead in the water service.

The C. & V.'s new planing mill is fast nearing its completion. The engine and two planers have been installed. The company has also added four hundred feet of river frontage at the lower end of their other property—making sixteen hundred feet of valuable frontage which is directly in the way of the channel, enabling all boats coming up the Columbia to land here.

A big surprise party! It was a rouser! Such a noisy crowd! At least that is what it was termed by Mr. Gay the night after his marriage. But could you blame the boys? Married without a send off? I guess not! The opening volley was like a waking of the dead. Ten "Winchesters" spoke as one, startling the whole town as it never was startled before; and the tin pans, fruit cans, and road scrapers were there to add to the music of a cornet or two. It was some minutes before Mr. Gay made his appearance and with great dignity demanded what was wanted. "Meet us at the store tomorrow night." It did not seem to agree with the victim of this boisterous lunch. Ten minutes of some more noise. Again the bridegroom appeared with the request that he would like to look at some of the boys. He was willingly accommodated, but again he retired angrily, and was met by his laughing bride inside. "Three cheers for her!" The noise resumes its former loudness. Well, it had to be done; it was a shame; in went the road scrapers against the house. How quickly it turned the tide of affairs! Immediately Mr. Gay appeared kindly asking the removal of the new noise maker and then out comes Mrs. Gay with an order for one hundred cigars. Bully for her!
