COOL BREEZES ON HOT DAYS.

No matter how sultry or uncomfortable the day, an ELECTRIC FAN will insure comfort for the business man at his desk, for his employes at their work, for the customers in his store, and for the entire household at his home.

The cost for all this SUMMER COMFORT is a mere trifle. A 16-inch fan can be operated at a cost not to exceed one cent an hour, and a 12-inch fan can be run for even less. Think of ten hours of solid comfort for less than ten cents.

Keep your store cool and breezy and your customers will find shopping a pleasure, and your store an inviting place in which to linger. ELECTRIC FANS will increase your business, whether it be a restaurant, an ice cream parlor, a dry goods emporium or an iron foundry.

We have fans of all kinds, all styles, suitable for every purpose. Don't delay—order your fan TO-DAY.

ELECTRIC LIGHT and the ELECTRIC FAN make a strong combination for summer comfort.

Send us a post card with your name and address—we will do the rest.

The first work of prisoners on the streets of the city was performed last week, and the unfortunates made a good job of it. The men were not of the hobo stripe, but horny-handed working men who had taken a drop too much and were unable to pay their fines—$8.50 each.

The fall term of the St. Johns public schools will begin Sept. 17—the same date as the schools of Portland. This change will make the school schedule of the two cities uniform, and enable any pupil of either place to take up their studies in the same grade and class without confusion in case of a change of residence.

The Wellington, Knight & Glover's new saloon in the Holbrook block, opened for business Monday. Weinhard's celebrated draught and bottled beers are handled exclusively. Case goods and family supplies will be made a specialty. A commodious billiard room has been arranged in the rear room. Messrs. Knight & Glover invite their friends to give them a call.

Rudolf Hallberg, whose house furnishing establishment was recently destroyed by fire, informs The Review that he will resume business in St. Johns as soon as his loss is adjusted. This news will be welcomed by all. During the time Mr. Hallberg was in business here he established an enviable record for honesty and fair dealing that won him a host of friends and customers.

The meeting held at the school house last Friday evening for the purpose of electing two members of the school board to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of Messrs. Brice and Ogden was well attended. There were three candidates—C. W. Potter, H. W. Brice and Willis Moxon. Mr. Potter was unanimously chosen. Mr. Brice was elected over Mr. Moxon by a vote of 39 to 17. With Messrs. Williams, Potter and Brice as members of the board everything will be harmonious and the business of the school transacted with fairness to all.

OF INTEREST

To All Old Timers and New Comers in St. Johns.

While standing in the old mill a panoramic view of what had transpired since then was passing through my mind. I see the Astoria boat coming up the river, the Dalles boat following after, little Fleetwood, the fastest boat on the river at that time, the old steamers Washington and Lurline trying to be the first at the wharf. Those were the days of steamboat rivalry, and how the pursers used to lead the ladies so gallantly down the gang plank, especially the old veterans, Dan O'Neil and Scott Sweetland. They will live long in the memories of their friends. I see the deckhands as they run up and down the gang plank carrying boxes for the canning factory on the lower river, and trucking barrels, made by Tom Williams in the old cooper shop, for the Sandwich Islands.

Few people of today know that at one time the Oregon Barrel Factory furnished nearly all the barrels for Claus Spreckels' great sugar industry. It is a fact just the same. I see Tom Robertson as he drives old Buck and Dan up the incline with a load of bolts for barrel staves to be cut by old Pedro, the Chinaman. Right there is where the old boarding house stood with old Uncle Hoyt standing in the door getting ready to go on duty as watchman at the mill. Who can ever forget the old man as he went about his work with his pipe held fast in his lips—a quaint, quiet old soul.

Then there is the little old Methodist church standing where the ship building plant now stands. It did duty for many years in different roles. There is where we all went to church to hear old man Johnson when he used to come on his periodical visits. There is where Emma Smith used to teach school. There is where Dr. Caples used to tell us all about Thomas Jefferson and the tariff. There is where we had our Christmas festivities, and who will say that we did not enjoy ourselves?

Just back of the church is where John Windle and his wife lived. Grandpa Windle, as we all called him, was a man who went about his daily toil with as little fuss and noise as any man possibly could. Grandpa was just the opposite, always full of bustle and of a nervous temperament. But what is the wonder when we think of the hardships and privations she had to endure when they first landed on Columbia slough in 1852.

As I turn around to go I see a man coming up the street. As he turns his head sideways, closes one eye, and says "Well," I recognize Charlie Palmer, the fellow who could tell you how it was done in Stockholm. The townspeople liked Charlie just the same. Do you remember the dances in the old carriage house for his benefit, and how Charlie dispensed the lemonade up on the hill?

I went on and some one says "Be gorra, it hot!" and I know that I have met P. T. Hanson. "Phin," we used to call him.

Just across the street there is an old man sitting outside by a fire. Approaching I find he is cooking his evening meal, and that it is Thomas Rogers—the man with the big bear story. After talking with him for a while, Mr. Editor, I concluded I would wait another week before I told you any more news.

OLD TIME POSTMASTERS.
 They Were Called Upon to Do All Manner of Queer Things.

The modern postmaster may think he has troubles of his own, but there was a time, along about 1817, when he was called upon to do all manner of queer things. For instance, in rummaging through an old trunk a venerable resident of Washington recently unearthed an age stained pamphlet which announced the inauguration of a "new daily and thrice a week paper," to be printed "at the seat of government." The announcement was dated April 5, 1817, and after a voluminous exposition of the virtues of the proposed paper the editor to be said:

"Postmasters are hereby authorized to receive subscriptions for the Gazette, and for all moneys collected and transmitted to the editor, at the city of Washington, a discount of 10 per cent will be allowed. Distant subscribers will have their papers carefully packed and punctually forwarded to order."

Then follows a set of blank spaces where the postmaster might append the names of the subscribers. The entire pamphlet was complete, and a copy was sent, presumably to every postmaster in the then United States. If every postmaster could thus be used as a "mail order agent" in these days of strenuous competition what a variety of duties they would be called upon to perform. But under the system that then existed this method was entirely proper, and it is said that the postmasters made considerable revenue from these sources. Needless to say this was before the days of the now celebrated "fraud order," which the postoffice department issues with every returning sun.

But getting back to the "prospectus," it is a weird affair, wonderfully and fearfully made. It actually states that "a competent reporter will be employed to furnish the proceedings of congress for the Gazette" and that all "interesting articles of intelligence will be carefully selected and published." When it says that "all public documents and state papers will be printed at full length" one is immediately reminded of the Congressional Record, a publication that has been without a rival in the memory of man.

It is also interesting that the editor to be, one Jonathan Elliott, advertised in April that he would start a paper in October. And he expected all these subscriptions to be forthcoming, evidently before the paper was established.—New Haven Union.

A Ruse of Childhood.

A local business man was reminiscence over his boyhood the other day, says an exchange. "Every morning before school I had to go out on the farm to hoe potatoes with father. We lived on a farm, you know. The potato patch was not a great distance from the house, and I was supposed to stay there until mother called me to come in, when it was time to dress for school. It wouldn't be long, of course, until I got tired. Then I'd watch father out of the corner of my eye until he seemed engrossed in what he was doing. Then I'd turn toward the house and yell, 'All right!' throw down my hoe and run for home. Mother was supposed to have called me to school. Father just thought he didn't hear her. I worked that right along, and, for all I know, he hasn't found it out yet."

He Made Allowance.

A French journal reports the case of a man who entered a coffee house and sat down near a customer who was reading the morning newspaper which belonged to the establishment.

"After you with the paper, if you please," said the newcomer.

The other man nodded assent and went on reading, but at the end of half an hour had hardly finished the first column. Just as the waiting customer was about making a second and perhaps impatient application, he noticed that the reader had lost one of his organs of sight. His resentment vanished.

"Ah," said he in a low voice, "I am not surprised. The poor man has only one eye and has to read everything twice over."

Adding Insult to Injury.

It is bad enough to have a red nose, as many entirely irreproachable women have, to their intense mortification, but to be gayed and swindled when one attempts to correct the deformity must be simply intolerable. "How to cure red noses permanently; absolute secrecy; send," etc., is an advertisement that appearing only recently in a London paper, aroused great interest among a large circle of unfortunates. When those women whose noses, from one cause or another, were pinker than they thought proper eagerly opened their stamped envelopes this was what they read: "Go on drinking until it becomes purple."

SUMMONS.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, County of Multnomah.
 Pearl Harris, Plaintiff, vs.
 O. E. Harris, Defendant.

To O. E. Harris, defendant:
 In the name of the state of Oregon you are hereby summoned and required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit on or before the 11th day of August, 1926, which is after six weeks have expired from the date of the first publication of this summons. It is prescribed in the order for the publication of summons that the summons be published for six successive weeks, and said order was made and dated the 22nd day of June, 1926, and the first publication thereof was made the 29th day of June, 1926, and if you fail to appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in her said complaint, to-wit: That the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and the defendant be dissolved and that she be divorced from him and for such other relief as shall seem equitable.

This summons is published once a week for six successive weeks in the St. Johns Review by order of the Honorable Judge Alfred Sears, Jr., judge of the above entitled court, made the 22nd day of June, 1926.

H. DEINSLER,
 Attorney for the plaintiff,
 414 Chamber of Commerce, Portland.
 First insertion June 29, 1926; last insertion August 11, 1926.
