EXPLOSION

Of the Union Oil Tanks Near Portsmouth.

A large oil tank on the bank of the river near Portsmouth belonging to the Union Oil Co. exploded with terrific force about 12 o'clock last Saturday night. The force of the explosion led many in the immediate vicinity to believe it was an earthquake.

The cause of the explosion is unknown. The watchman is missing and his death has been established. An oil steamer had tied up at the dock and was making preparations to discharge its cargo. Leonard Jacque, the watchman, went to the top of a large tank, and lifting the cover from the manhole, attempted to descend into the tank with a lighted lantern. An explosion followed that carried the iron roof of the tank half a mile away. The flames spread rapidly, and the entire plant, consisting of five The City of St. Johns does ordain as foltanks and the pumping house, together with 50,000 barrels of oil gether with 50,000 barrels of oil Johns shall erect a City Hall and that the said City Hall shall be erected at a
