REPUGNANT MEALS.

What People Can Live on Under the Stress of Circumstances.

The inhabitants of Paris once lived under Henry IV. during a siege on the most repugnant meals. All grass which could be found, even that growing between the stones of the pavement, was cooked into soups. In a field oven erected especially for this purpose "delicious" pastries of ground bones were made up during a period of three weeks, and the necessary bones were obtained from a nearby cemetery.

OLD STREET CRIES.

The Din That Deafened London in Days of Long Ago.

Somewhere about a score of years ago there was published in London a tiny volume of most unusual interest to students of old time manners and customs. It was called "Old London Street Cries" and contained several hundred familiar calls, beginning with the middle of the fifteenth century, in which, as in a mirror, one can see reflected the life of the common people through the years—what they ate and drank and wore, their furniture and amusements, the toys their children played with and their luxuries, long since become commonest necessities.

WELL SET UP.

Lord Waterford used to tell some good stories of his experience as an Irish magistrate. One of them referred to the case of a woman whom he had to sentence for a breach of the peace. He let her off on condition that she find two securities of £10 each that she would keep the peace for six months.

A Rustic Critic.

One day while Millais was engaged in painting his famous picture, "Chill October," among the reeds and rushes on the banks of the Tay, near Perth, a voice came from over the hedge:

Asserting Himself.

"I'm anxious to get the names of all present," said the reporter. "Will you oblige me?"
