Jared Aiken and family, accompanied by our genial friend, C. W. Arnett, took dinner with C. T. Moe and wife Wednesday evening. The evening was spent in music and song, interspersed by pointed anecdotes by versatile "Charles."

B. S. Swengel, brother of our townsman W. E. Swengel, has been on the coast since June, visiting several points and says he likes the appearance of things in St. Johns and the great possibilities so apparent in a commercial way here. He expects to make his home here and is sparing for an opening.

The drill team of Portland Homestead No. 916, Independent Order of Brotherhood of American Yeomen will put on the initiation for the St. Johns Homestead No. 1221 at Bickners hall on this evening, September 6. H. A. Miller, our Pacific coast manager, will be with us. All members be present. A. E. Mansfield.

C. W. Bennett of the St. Johns meat market in forms us that he has decided to take off his delivery wagon, sell his meats for cash and give to his patrons the benefit of this saving in expenses. It is a heavy tax to keep a team and driver to run the wagon, besides, when a patron comes to the market he can always receive better satisfaction when he sees and knows what he is buying. Watch for Mr. Bennett's ad next week. He will have something further to say on this subject.

Dick Shepard returned Tuesday from his visit to Grand Rapids, Mich. He speaks very highly of the enterprising spirit and progressiveness manifested by the people of his old home. There has been a wonderful improvement in the city. Not so great as there has been here and in Portland, but great, nevertheless. He says there is no fruit there this year though. A yellow borer has killed nearly every peach tree in that great peach section, and the trees that escaped the worms were killed by the late frosts. Consequently they are peachless this season. Dick spent a delightful week at Saugatuck, one of Michigan's most lovely summer resorts, and he, with some other Michiganders made the voyage of their lives in a new launch 40 miles or more across and up one of the rivers.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an advertisement of the Multnomah county fair. St. Johns has been designated as one district in the voting contest for the Queen of the Carnival. Our people should decide upon some certain young lady and combine all their forces upon this one individual and boost the balloting. It would be a big red feather in the hat of St. Johns if we were able to send one of our queens to grace the central point of honor in the carnival.

Will Buck, brother of Mrs. S. C. Smith of North Albina, who is one of Walla Walla's fly cops was a visitor in St. Johns Tuesday. Will and the writer "bucked ties" together ten years ago for the Davenport Bros. at Hood River. We would hardly have known him. He has grown to the proportions of a typical metropolitan policeman. Mr. Buck speaks in glowing terms of the progressiveness of his home town.

Tuesday as we were waiting for the ferry boat to start we were watching some youngsters of ages running from eight or ten to 60 fishing for croppies from a scow alongside the boat. One of the youngest, Freddie Evans lost his balance and fell into the water. He plunked right down, but was under only a second, and as his companions were jumping sideways in their excitement Freddie puffed the water out of his mouth and coolly said "I can swim," and he did, around to the side where one of the older boys helped him on deck again. He grabbed his pole and pulled in another croppie as if the ducking was a part of the regular program.

J. T. Saylor of The Dalles, general foreman of construction of the Great Southern, south of that city, was in St. Johns Wednesday and made this office a pleasant visit. Railroaders are always welcome here. After 21 years in the service, we know how to sympathize with them. Mr. Saylor is an old friend of our townsman, S. C. Norton, and they were fellow workmen on the N. P. 15 years ago. Wednesday was the first time these old cronies had met since that time. Mr. Saylor shows his good judgment by purchasing a fine lot, and his business here this time is to arrange for the erection of an elegant residence for his future home here. We are happy to extend the glad hand to all the fraternity. They are the salt of the earth and are what makes the wheels go round. Were it not for our railroaders we would have a rocky time of it in these days of get there quick and rustle.

You are invited to attend the Congregational church next Sunday and hear the following subjects discussed—11 a. m., "A Mighty Helper;" 7:45 p. m., "Contrasted Paths and Opposite Characters." G. W. Nelson, pastor.

Ed Hurlburt brought his family down from Estacada to their Chicago street home Friday.
