Whistler's Arrangement of the Pictures a Joke on the Artists. Late in life, when people had begun to realize the genius of the man, Whistler was asked to arrange the annual Liverpool exhibition, and here, in his own words, is how he did it, according to Heinemann's "Life of Whistler." "You know, the academy baby by the dozen had been sent in, and I got them all in my gallery, and in the center at one end I placed the birth of the baby-splendid-and opposite the baby with the mustard pot and opposite that the baby with the puppy and in the center, on one side, the baby Ill, doctor holding its pulse, mother weeping: on the other, by the door, the baby dead-the baby's funeral-baby from the cradle to the grave-baby in heaven, bables of all kinds and shapes all along the line; not crowded, you know, hung with proper respect for the baby.

"And on the varnishing day in came the artists, each making for his own baby-amazing! His baby on the line -nothing could be better! And they all shook my hand and thanked meand went to look-at the other men's bables and they saw bables in front of them, babies behind them, babies to the right of them, bables to left of them. And then-you know-their faces fell-they didn't seem to like it -and-well-ba, ha, they never asked me to hang the pictures again at Liv-

THE VENTRILOQUIST.

Only an Amateur, but His Exhibition Was a Success.

"I was one of a house party up the Thames," said an amateur ventriloquist. "Ten had been served in the garden, and after tea I consented to essay a little ventriloquism, and the fifty or sixty guests grew very still.

"Behind me rose a superb tree. Looking up into the thick foliage, I shouted in a loud and angry voice: 'Hello! What are you doing up there?

"To my smazement a thin young voice replied:

" 'I nin't doin' no harm, mister. I'm just a-watchin' the big bugs." "The guests glanced at one another. smiling appreciatively. Pulling myself together, I went on:

Rate' Cold Weather Retreat. Many animals snuggle together for warmth in bitter weather, as the squirrels and the rats. Those who go ratting in hedges and dells in the winter know they may try a dozen freshly used burrows without finding a rat. when suddenly from a single hole the rats will come pouring out in a stream of frenzied for. Twenty or more rats will lie together in one hole,

They are clever enough to block up a hole on the windward side to keep out the draft, so that when a rat hole is noted newly stopped with soil, turnip leaves or grass here is almost certain indication that rats are within. Like the squirrels, they store food for winter, and the keeper may find it more difficult to secure his potatoes from frost than from the attack of the most numerous of his furred foes .-London Standard.

A Rattled Bridegroom.

Some few years ago a man of ma ture age found himself playing first fiddle to marriage bells. Then they hied themselves away, as others have done, to Niagara Falls. He chuckled to himself as he took a pen to enter on a hotel register for the first time "John Doe and wife."

He thought he wrote with the easy air of one who had so written it there many years and turned carelessly

On leaving the proprietor inquired, "I hope you have enjoyed your honeymoon with us."

"Str-r?" But he merely turned the register back and pointed to this entry, "John Doe and bride." He had been as "rattled" as any boy.

The Safest Employment.

The person who is least affected by trade depression and "slumps" in production is the peasant proprietor. Sierra Leone known to fame as "the white man's grave"-viewed from the deck of an in oming steamer presents an appearance distinctly attractive. As to climate, the sobriquet "white man's grave" is sufficiently instructive. Suffice it to say that the first of the daily regimental orders ran thus: "Funeral parade at 6:30 a. m. tomorrow," and it was seldom indeed that the parade was dismissed for lack of a victim to the pestiferous climatic conditions. Indeed, so arduous became the duties of sepulcher that, whereas it was customary in the beginning for the entire regiment and band to attend, only the company of the deceased and the firing party did so later on. Siera Leone is infested with snakes, large and small. The former are of the constrictor specles; the latter are all extremely venomous. The most deadly of all perhaps is the yellow jack, a beautiful yellow and black reptile, whose bite is reputed to prove fatal within a space of twenty minutes .- Westchester County Magazine.

What Is It, a Lobster? That the methods of public school instruction as applied in one city at least do not always meet the approbation of the parents of the pupils was evidenced when a German man whose bristly blond hair was standing per-Raltimore school one day and, approaching the principal, demanded:

Saved His Rupees.

During a great flood at Haidarabad a native banker, overtaken by the sudden rush of water, made his way on lated. The water rose, and the banker's legs were covered to his knees. "Fifty rupees (about £3 7s.), 50 rupees," he shouted, "to any one who will save When the water reached his shoulder be was shouting, "One thousand rupees!" When enveloped to his neck, with death staring him in the face, he yelled; "Help, help! All that I have will I give to any one to save me!" Shortly after the water began to recede. When once more he was covered only to his knees an offer of rescue came. But the banker, plucking up his courage, cried: "Keep off! Keep off! I will not give a rupee!" and succeeded in making his escape free of charge,-St. James' Gazette.

The Rice God.

In the Malay peninsula, after a general propitiatory service has been held as an "apology" to the rice for cutting it, the "rice soul" is diligently sought. First the spot where the best rice grows is selected; then seven stems are chosen, each having seven joints. Within this sacred bundle resides the soul of the whole precious field, and, dressed in swaddling clothes like a live infant, it is borne home in a basket and tenderly, reverently, placed on a new sleeping mat. After the rice harvest in Ceylon the priests take a little old god called Marell down to the river. A hole is dug where the water is shallow, and into this is crammed a bag of dry rice, with the god placed on top. The saturated rice expands, forcing the image upward, so that in about fifteen days comes to the surface and is welcomed as a new god with acciama- piled.

Luck In Golf.

Luck, as will readily be understood, is a factor that enters very largely into golf. Perhaps the most notable case on record is that of Jamie Anderson when competing for the chamfeetly erect with anger strode into a pionship at Prestwick in 1878. He had just teed his ball for the seventeenth drive when a little girl standing among the spectators remarked that he had unconsciously placed it just in est tone that a lobster was a species front of the proper line. Although nobody else had noticed the fact, this proved on examination by the referee to be correct. Thereupon Anderson teed his ball again in a fresh position well behind the line and made a drive which landed him in the hole and eventually enabled him to win the match. If, however, he had played it from the original spot he would have been penalized a stroke and have lost the championship. Clearly, then, luck on the links is something to be taken into consideration whatever nonbeliev-Magazine

ne Popular With the Students-Objection Made to Others.

Some of the colleges have a great dislike to the way in which they are referred to commonly in connection with athletics. For instance, Wes leyan men don't like to be called "the Methodists," as they appear sometimes. At the Naval academy there is a strong prejudice against being called "Annapolis." The navy men aren't particularly fond of "midshipmen." They believe the proper name for their institution is "the navy." Columbia has a great distaste for the name of "Columbians" for their representatives in athletics or other public

Although not so strongly opposed to it, students at Pennsylvania do not like the full title "University of Pennsylvania" as well as plain "Pennsylvania." "Penn" is preferred to either. "Maroons" for Chicago men, "Gophers' for Minnesota, "Badgers" for Wisconsin students, "Cornhuskers" for Nebraska, "Wolverenes" for Michigan. "Illini" for the men of Illinois-all are names that are popular at those colleges and are used by the men there in speaking of their own teams. Indeed, to a man unacquainted with nicknames the average statement regarding a conference college is puzzling because of the almost entire lack of straightout names.-New York Sun.

To take note of but one-Hippocrates is there. The student will not turn to his pages now to learn what has to be taught in modern text books or class rooms. Yet he will do well to lay to heart the spirit that guided "the father of medicine" in drawing up the oath imposed on the students of the Hippocratic school. "With purity and holiness," the candidate was with made to swear, "I will pass my life and practice my art. Into whatever houses I enter I will go into them for the benefit of the sick, will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief and corruption." In the long succession of those who have enlarged the bounds of his science the student will meet with a great army of men who have kept the spirit of that oath under higher sanetions than were open to the pioneers whom the mediaeval poet consigns to a place in his inferno because, though blameless of sin, they had not been baptized.—Str Alexander Simpson in London Quiver.

Hugo and Merimee.

It is probable that with the exception of Byron no great literary genius ever was greeted with such a storm of vilification and abuse as Victor Hugo when he published "Les Miserables." While the book took the pubthe literally off their feet, almost all way we figure it. Hugo's rivals united in condemning it and its author.

Prosper Merimee wrote in reference to a dinner given to Hugo at Brussels: "Have you read Victor Hugo's speech at the dinner given to him by Belgian librarians and other scoundreis of Brussels? His statements were without depth, solidity or common sense. He is a man who intoxicates himself with words and does not take the trouble to think."

Victor Hugo retorted by writing to a friend, "M. Merimee is a man naturally vile."
