AN ENGLISH HOLIDAY

How East Side London Plays on Boxing Day.

ROUGH SPORT IS THE RULE.

All Cockneyland Flocks to Historic Hampstead Heath, Where Hilarity, Fast and Furious, Rules From Early Morning Till After Midnight.

Boxing day is a great institution in England. The day after Christmas is Boxing day, so called because in the old days it marked the occasion of the netual giving of Christmas boxes. Now it is a national holiday. Besides being the last in the year, it has to suffice Londoners, at all events, until Easter Monday. It's a great day in Cockneyland, and the east end crowds to Hampstead heath, the picturesque open space in the northwest of London.

All roads lead to the heath. Soon after daybreak the procession begins. Fully loaded traps and donkey barrows are the principal items in the vehicular traffic, but the majority are on foot, singing and shouting for the holiday.

" Ere yer are, Sir 'Enery." shouts a woman, pushing a tin squirt filled with water into your face. "'Ere yer are, Sir 'Enery; all the fun of the fair. Two a penny. 'Ave a couple, will yer,

The London street merchants have the habit of giving prospective customers a title, presumably on the theory that a Londoner likes to have you be

Heve that he is some well known man. Should you be persuaded into buying "a couple" the chances are a moment later you will be face to face with 'Arriet. She wears a large hat trimmed with large feathers of brilliant hue, has a hair fringe down over her forehead and a bright colored velvet dress, Probably several will be in a line, each with an arm around the other's neck

There is battle in their eyes, and before you are aware of it a stream of water will be running down your face. The best thing to do is to retreat, for If you should give battle you are sure to retire, defeated, with your collar pitches will first claim your notice. 'Ere yer are, kernel; seven shies a tanner. Every one yer knocks dahn yer 'ave. They're all milky. Loidies and kids 'arf way."

Then this scene will meet your eye: Outside a large tent stands a raised platform. On it are half a dozen men stripped to the waist with arms folded across their chests. One of them, evidently the proprietor, twists a large rattle, which gives forth a most deafening noise. At last it stops, and he

"Loidies and gents, I wants ter hinterduce to yer notice some of the best boxers in the world, 'Im at the end is Fellx Scott of Liverpool, 'E'll fight any man in the crabd, and if he don't 'Im a quid. Nah, then, who'll 'ave 'em | See Ed Stockton.

on with the champion?" Some one accepts the inviting offer, and a rush is made to pay the admis sion fee and get into the tent,

A company of traveling actors is as sembled on the platform outside the next tent, all made up in their war paint. The piece to be performed is "Otbello." The price of admission is a penny. A reserved seat, an empty box, will cost you another penny. And the house soon fills.

Outside you will find every form of outdoor amusement in full swing-"Aunt Sallies," swings, roundabouts, skipping and donkeys. The latter are greatly patronized. Young men and maldens, old men and women, all have "a pannorth of donkey ride." A fat woman clings to one poor beast's neck shouting:

"Oo'er, I'm sure I'm falling. Don't make 'Im go so fast. Ho, look at me 'at. Lemme get off. I'm sure yer 'Itting 'im."

When the dust has cleared away she is seen lying in the road panting:

"I know'd yer done it on purpose!" At last the journey home is begun, everybody happy and tired, yet not too tired to link arms, the men wearing the girls' feathered bats and pearl buttoned coats and the girls wearing caps and hats and wondrous masculine jackets. All are singing different songs, but every now and then they break forth in unison with popular songs of the moment. In the saloons they drink beer out of one pewter and swear undying love and friendship till the voice of the proprietor, it now being 12:30 in the morning and closing time, is heard calling, "Time, gents, please," and a final start is made

This may answer the question why the average Cockney worker always wants a second day off to get over Boxing day.-New York Times.

Wanted to See Them.

When Helen, aged four, for the first time accompanied her mother to church she was given some money for the collection box. It was enrefully explained to her that this money was for the poor."

Helen sat patiently through perhaps a third of the service, when she startled her mother by rattling the coins between her cupped hands and inquiring in a loud voice: "Mamma, when are the poor coming around? My 8 cents is getting all hot and sticky!"-Lippincott's Magazine.

The difference between poor stock and first class stock on a job is a small item when you consider the value of the job. It is the price of a satisfied customer. It is better to make 50 cents less on a job and have a customer who will come back, than to use the flimsy stock, make the extra 50 cents and lose your customer. That is the way we figure it.
