lisher, Faulkner. An amusing story of George Faulkner, the printer of many of Dean Swift's works, who lived in Parliament street, Dublin, is told by Mr. Wilmot Harrison in "Memorable Dublin Houses." Mr. Harrison relates how Faulkner, after a visit to London on business for Swift, called to see the dean, having arrayed himself in a laced waistcoat, a bagwig and other fopperies. Swift received him ceremoniously as an entire stranger and asked:

"Pray, sir, what are your commands with me?"

"I thought it my duty to wait upon you, sir, on my return from London." "Pray, sir, who are you?"

"George Faulkner, the printer." "You George Faulkner, the printer: Why, thou art the most impudent, barefaced impostor I ever heard of! George Faulkner is a sober, sedate citisen and would never trick himself out in lace and other fopperies. Get you about your business and thank your stars that I do not send you to the bouse of correction!" Poor George returned home and, having changed his dress, returned to the deanery and was received most cordially by Swift, who, having wel-
