FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1910.

The Review's course in taking neither side on the liquor question during the campaign which has just closed, seems to have met with general approbation, judging from many complimentary remarks we have heard concerning same. There were, however, at least two instances that we know of where this course did not please. The day after election one local business man peremptorily ordered his ad. out, presumably because we did not take up the dry end of it. Another shining light in one of the churches ordered his paper stopped, and since he sent a dollar along to pay up his arrears we took great pleasure in wiping his name off the slate. Now if there are any more men in St. John of the same calibre, we would like to hear from them without delay, and to let the people in general know how indignant they feel and to what lengths they will go in expressing said disapproval we will publish their names free of charge. If a business is to be boycotted in a small way because it did not follow the lead of some dry enthusiast or wet enthusiast, the world must be getting better fast. This paper at one time traveled very nearly the precipice of business disaster by advocating a principle like unto the recent one, and as "a burnt child dreads the fire," we decided there was more room in the middle of the road so far as the paper was concerned. And we believe we did right. The paper was open to an argument from either side, and both sides took advantage of the opportunity. The only remark the Review made was in deploring the fact that personalities had been injected into the campaign. Personally, our views and impressions on the question are strictly private property. We vote according to the dictates of our conscience and we intend to keep it up. If we are to be further boycotted for our course in the matter we would like to know it right now, so that we can govern ourselves accordingly.

The Meat Question

The schemes of "civilization" to put food materials (mixed with some materials that are not food), through various complications that greatly increase the price and hence the profit to the mixers, and that capture trade by putting out a product that has a different appearance, color, odor or taste from the same thing in a less expensive form are entirely based upon our anthropoid curiosity.

In the case of meats, for instance, the farmer takes grain worth a cent and a half a pound and feeds it to a steer who completely consumes fourteen out of fifteen pounds of it, and deposits in his carcass together with the fifteen pounds of grain, two pounds of water. Now this steer the farmer sells to a packer at a rate high enough to pay for all his feed, labor and the loss from animals that did not thrive. Next the packer turns forty per cent of this steer into fertilizer and fuses and fixes the rest of it up and passes it on to us through the hands of a dozen storage men, wholesalers and retailers: finally, it reaches the consumer a pitifully meagre share of the original food grown on the farm, and hopelessly loaded with the product of the steer's physiological economy and the packer's chemical laboratory.

When one considers the waste and folly of the whole proceeding, instead of being surprised that meats are high, he wonders that they are so low.—From Physical Culture for March.

George H. Williams, "Oregon's grand old man," passed peacefully to his home on high early Monday morning. His was a life full of honor, of good deeds, of fine statesmanship and his character was above reproach. Such men have a tendency to make the world better and purer, and his memory will linger long with those who knew and respected him so highly.

Since the election is over and the Hindu rumpus has abated, everybody should buckle down to business and push St. John's progress rapidly along.

That the cost of said improvement to be assessed as provided by the city charter upon the property especially and particularly benefited thereby, and which is hereby declared to be all of lots, parts of lots, blocks and parcels of land between the termini of such improvements abutting upon, adjacent or proximate to said Tyler Street, from the marginal lines of said street back to the center of the block or blocks or tracts of land abutting thereon or proximate thereto. That all the property included in said improvement district aforesaid is hereby declared to be "Local Improvement District No. 34." That the city engineer's assessment of the probable total cost of said improvement of said Tyler Street is $20,400.00. Andrew Carnegie first worked for $1.25 per week. It is of record that he saved twenty-five cent pieces. Today he keeps three people busy helping him spend the interest on his money. If Carnegie began that way, why can't you? The First National Bank will help you and compound your interest every six months. A Bargain—House and lots. See Calif Bros., opposite postoffice.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS. Mrs. Lulu Loveland Shepherd will lecture at the Baptist church next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. No one who has heard her will miss hearing her again. The Morning Oregonian says of her: Mrs. Shepherd is a noted club woman and has a wide experience as a teacher, leaving the school room to take the platform for temperance, though she is much in demand for club meetings as a speaker. The Seattle Daily Times says: Mrs. Shepherd has gained the title "Silver tongued orator of the Rocky Mountains" on account of her exceptional power as a platform orator. There are also favorable comments from Boise papers, Butte, Montana, Lewiston, Lagrange, and many others. Do not fail to hear her at the Baptist church at St. Johns next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. The American Falls press says: "People are glad to pay $2.00 to witness a play that is in no way superior to the entertainment Mrs. Shepherd provides." Do not miss it. We wish to announce to the ladies of St. Johns that the mothers' meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. S. J. Donaldson, at 506 West Charleston street, next Monday afternoon at 2:30. We expect to have an interesting program. Mrs. Carey has promised to sing for us. "Come thou with us and we will do thee good." Do not forget the time and place, next Monday, 2:30 p. m., 506 West Charleston street, four blocks west of Central school.
