Dear Friend:

Teeth, the hardest portion of the body, should be the last to decay and die. They are generally the first. They are absolutely necessary to maintain bodily health. Disease of teeth or their surroundings means pain, misery, possible perma-nent physical disturbance, partial or total loss of sight, smell, taste, hearing, health, good looks, en-

Teeth are given us to chew with, and no one has greater need of per-fect teeth than the child, for it is in childhood that he is building up the body to withstand the stress of the years to come, and not only his physical but his mental vigor de-pends upon the food he can digest and assimilate.

A child with sore and sensitive teeth does not chew his food well. He can't. As the result, he swal. because they all have shells around lows his food only partially masti-cated, therefore, he suffers from in-side of an egg that counts. Can't digestion and other disorders that arise therefrom. His body does not receive that nourishment it taste it? I can. My mamma should receive, and his whole or-ganism suffers in consequence. Your friend

A child is like a tree or a plant In its earlier years it is not only growing, but building up what we term its "constitution."

If we are to be strong and vigorous at maturity, we must have health and vigor in childhord, and this we cannot have unless we Muck Mercantile have teeth to properly masticate our food before it goes into the alimentary tract.

The child quickly forms habits. If his teeth are sore, he bolts his food. If he continues this for a short time he forms the habit of bolting. This he carries through Most complete line of life, with the certainty of the discomforts of indigestion and its attendant evils.

Sore teeth are diseased teeth. Decayed spots become the nesting place of germs, some harmless, some deadly. The saliva, which constantly bathes these diseased teeth, carries bacteria to the stomach, and thus the whole alimentary tract is subjected to constant con-tact with diseased germs.

If the system is in a weakened condition, illness results. Conta-gious diseases are more apt to find a resting place there than they would if the little body was strong and healthy. Teeth where abscesses are formed and allowed to continue, not only poison the alimentary tract, but are often the exciting cause of eye and ear trouble.

Specialists, who are not given to exaggeration, attribute many of the serious disorders which follow us later in life to the bad teeth of childhood.

We have the assertion of a promi-

Ninety per cent of the bacteria in the mouth can be removed by regular, proper cleaning. I think I am safe in saying there is not one child in fifty who takes proper care of his teeth. The parents say: "I wonder why Willie's teeth decay so rapidly? They are just like chalk. I believe there is not enough lime in the water." My good reader, how can you expect anything else, when little Willie feeds on sweet things from morn till night, and don't know a tooth-brush from a pickax. Teeth brushing should be as reg-ular a habit as eating and sleeping. Teach the child the gospel of the tooth-brush and mouth bath and there will be less cause for complaint and the dental bill will be materially decreased. J. Vinton Scott.
