AN ARGUMENT

Merchants in small towns like St. Johns must depend on the friendship of their customers. In order to establish friendship we have to treat you right. Stores in the city are after the transient customer, and care not whether they see you again. Try to have a mistake corrected, a defective rubber or pair of shoes made good and see what red tape you must see unwound. Try to offer payment in check at a large store and see the time it takes to find out if your check is good. Your home merchant knows you; knows your check. We are bound to treat you fairly, if we do not everybody knows it. In 1911, we will have more stock than ever; we will do our utmost to please you. Our prices on everything will be strictly right. We shall do all in our power to merit your patronage. We will back up our advertising.
