I remember one occasion, writes Colonel William H. Crook in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, when Mrs. Harrison had finally decided upon some slight architectural changes and had brought her architect's plans to the president and asked his opinion of them. General Harrison studied the drawlags with care and noticed that several niches were left, each plainly marked. At last he said:

"Well, my dear, here is a place for Lincoln, and here is a place for Grant's bust. And you have left three places for Vest." Then he added, with well assumed Indignation, "I am decidedly apposed to so many monuments to Vest-in the White House!

Mrs. Harrison hastened to explainwhat her husband, of course, knew all the time-4hat the word "Vest," was the architect's contraction for vestibule, of which there were three on the plans, whereupon the president said he was satisfied and handed the drawings back to her, with a twinkle in his keen blue eyes.

A FIERCE ANATHEMA.

The Pious Wish a Woman Flung at

Jean Paul Richter. Jean Paul Richter once observed that if a lady officer wanted to give the word "Halt!" she would do it in the following strain: "You soldiers, all of you, now mind what I say. I order you as soon as I have done speaking to stand still, every one of you, on the spot where you happen to be. Don't you hear me? Halt, I say, all of you!

Upon this a strong minded weman made the following comment: "Now, M. Jean, It was an unlucky day on which you wrote that sentence. May you never hear anything but that little, concise word 'No' from every rosy pair of lips you meet. May you halt wifeless through life. May your buttons be snappish, your strings knotty and your stockings full of holes. May your bootlack be missing, your feet corny and your shaving water cold, your razor dull, your hair stand up, your collar lie down. May your beard be porcuplny, your whiskers thinly settled and your mustache curl the wrong way. May your coffee he muddy, your toast smoky and your tea water bewitched, and, with a never dying desire for affection, may you crawl through creation a meek, miserable, masty, forlorn, fidgety, fussy, ridiculous, ruined, dejected old bachelor."

High Sounding Names.

Writing in his Paris paper on the growing custom on the part of parents to give their children "high sounding" names, Clement Vautel says; "When the boy is old enough to understand he rebels at being compelled to carry through life a name like Annereon or Hipparchus. But he has company. I him Franklin. The name in liself is not so bad, but he has two brothers, Voltaire and Socrates respectively. Fancy this scene in the nursery: Franklin howling because Voltairs has broken his toy, while Socrates laurha at both. The mother as peacemaker shorts, 'Stop, Socrates, or you'll be punished?' In a narrow street in Marseitles one broiling hot day I saw a woman spanking a child, shouting In anger, 'You naughty Epanthondes; Pll teach you, Epaminondes!" I could never think of the Theban general after that without laughing."

To Say and to Do. "Do you wish to go to church this evening? Father is going to preach, you know," the minister's fair daugh ter naked.

GOETHE ON HAMLET.

The Great German Poet's Analysis of "the Melancholy Dane."

Figure to yourself this youth, this son of princes; conceive him vividiy, bring his state before your eyes and then observe him when he learns that his father's spirit walks. Stand bethe White House as may be necessary fore him in the terror of the night when the venerable spirit appears over him. A horrid shudder passes over him; he speaks to the mysterious form; he sees it beckon to him; he follows it and hears. The fearful accusation of his uncle rings in his ears, the summons to revenge and the plereing oft repeated prayer, "Remember

And when the ghost has vanished who is it that stands before us? A roung hero panting for vengeance? No! Trouble and astonishment take hold of the solitary young man. He grows bitter against smiling villains, swears that he will not forget the spirit and concludes with the signifiant ejaculation:

The time is out of joint. O cursed spite, That ever I was born to set it right!

In these words, I imagine, will be found the key to Hamlet's whole proedure. To me it is clear that Shakespeare meant in the present case to represent the effects of a great action laid upon the soul unfit for the performance of it. In this view the whole piece seems to be composed There is an oak tree planted in a cost ly jar which should have borne only pleasant flowers in its bosom; the roots expand, the jar is shivered. -From "Wilhelm Meister."

SACKING A THEATER.

Tribulations of the Drama In New Vork In 1765.

Here is an account of the sacking of theater in New York from the Gazette of May 3, 1705; "The play advertised to be acted last Monday evening having given offense sundry and divers inhabitants of this city, who thought it highly Improper that such entertainments should be exhibited at this time of public distress, when great numbers of poor people can scarce find means of subsistice, whereby many persons might be tempted to neglect their business and uander that money which is necessary to the payment of their debts and the support of their families, a rumor was spread about the town that if the play went on the audience would meet with some disturbance from the multi-

"This prevented the greatest part of ose who intended to have been there from going. However, many people came, and the play was begun, but soon interrupted by the multitude, who burst open the doors and entered with noise and tumult. The audience escaped in the best manner they could. Many lost their bats and other articles of raiment. A boy had his skull fractured and was yesterday trepanned. Death is his. Several others were orely set upon and injured. But we heard of no lives lost. The multitude immediately demolished the house, carried the pieces to the common, where they consumed them in a bonfire."

A Cautious Scot, chaven lies to the south of Aber The London train had drawn up at Stonehaven on account of a slight mishap a mile or two ahead, and Andra, the old porter, had got into conversation with a Salvation Army officer, who had popped his head out of the compartment to ask the reason for the delay. "Aye, aye," mused Andra after giving the desired informa-"ye'll be for Alberdeen, I'm thinkin'?" "Yes, my man," was the reply; "I'm bound for Aberdeen, a very wicked place, I'm told." "What micht ye be goin' to dae there, sir, if It's as bad as a' that?" asked Andra. rather amused at the visitor's words. 'Ah," was the pious answer, "I'm going to drive the devil out of Aberdeen." Like lightning come from the old porter the pawky reply, "See an' drive him north, chiel; hauf him well to the north."

AN ARGUMENT

Merchants in small towns like St. Johns must depend on the friendship of their customers. In order to establish friendship we have to treat you right, Stores in the city are after the transient customer, and care not whether they see you again. Try to have a mistake corrected, a defective rubber or pair of shoes made good and see what red tape you must see unwound. Try to offer payment in check at a large store and see the time it takes to find out if your check is good. Your home merchant knows you; knows your check. We are bound to treat you fairly, if we do not everybody knows it. In 1911, we will have more stock than ever; we will do our utmost to please you. Our prices on everything will be strictly right. We shall do all in our power to merit your patronage. We will back up our advertising.
