A Tabor Story.

Count Boyenta, Mme, Modjeska's husband, was arranging with Senator Tabor for Modjeska's first appearance in Denver, and the founder of dramatic art in Denver asked what parts she

"Well," said the count, "there is 'Mary Stuart.' "

"Who wrote it?" asked Tabor, "Se! r." said the count.

Who wrote them?" "Shakespeare." "How's be? Good writer?"

"Excellent, excellent." "Well," sald Tabor ruminatively,

"those fellows may be all right as authors, but they ain't well enough known to suit the people out here. What we want is something popular, something that everybody's heard of. I tell you what you do-you get her to give us something of Hoyt's!"

Fearful Fate of Ravaillac.

In these days when executions, if held at all, are mostly carried out in private, it is difficult for us to understand the feelings of savagery with which an old time mob witnessed a popular execution. Here is Bloundelle Burton's account-from "The Fate of Henry of Navarre"-of the scene when Ravalline, the assassin of the king. had, after shocking tortures, been torn asunder by wild horses: "The executioner had begun to dismember him and was about to east his remains into the second caldron when the vast crowd prevented him from doing so. They each required a portion of the hody of the king's assassin, and most of them obtained one. That night many bonfires blazed in and around Paris, and in their midst were consumed pieces of Ravalliac's frame; on barn doors in other places were nalled similar scraps of his body, as hawks and owls and carrion crows were nalled as a warning to others of their breed."

Peppered Ice Cream.

"There's pepper in that," said a restaurant waiter, pointing to a small silver shaker he had placed beside a heaping dish of ice cream he was carring to a guest. "Sure, it's to put on the ice cream, too," he replied when an inquirer failed to see the connec tion between the two. "Lots of folks want to put pepper on their ices. You see, if a man's stomach is sensitive the cold cream hurts him, but pepper is stimulating enough to overcome the effects of the cold. And the funny thing is that you cream is so cold that it kills the other. If you don't believe it I'll give you some with pepper, and you'll find that there's no taste of pepper there

A Buttered Book. How the Rev. Mr. Johnston, a Scottish minister and the author of numerous books, succeeded in getting one of his works reviewed by Alexander Russel, the distinguished editor of the Scotsman, is told by the writer of "Famous Editors."

A member of Mr. Johnston's congregation was an old and valued servant in Mr. Russel's family. When the preacher published his new book he asked this member to bring it under the notice of her master, with the request to review it in the columns of the Scotsman. Glad to be of service to her master, the good woman lost no time in making her wish known to the celebrated editor and next morning placed "The Gospel Roll" beside his brenkfast cup

When at breakfast Mr. Russel took up the book and remarked, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "Helen, this is an awful dry roll which you have given me this morning." "Perhaps It Is, sir," the servant quickly replied, "but you can butter it weel on both sides." Next morning an excellent review

The virtuous island of Sark was not king. Sark was a haunt of pirates and thus impingeing or otherwise interwreckers. Sir A. Conan Doyle in "Sir Nigel" tells how they lived not upon the Island, "but from what they can gather upon the sea around it. They are broken folk from all countriesjustice fliers, prison breakers, reavers, escaped bondsmen, murderers and staff breakers who have made their way to this outland place and hold it against all comers." The merchants of Rye and Winchelsen fitted out an expedition against those scourges of the narrow seas. A landing was obtained by strategy. Leave was obtained to bury a supposititious dead sailor on the island, the burying party to come unarmed. But that apparent coffin was filled with weapons, and so was Sark cleansed of its evil inhabitants.-London Standard.
