Perry Miller has exchanged his St. Johns property for a fine ranch near Battleground, Wash. He left with his family for his new possessions yesterday. Mr. Miller was one of our very best citizens and his removal is a distinct loss to the city.

A New York judge has just decided that the car company must settle if a sleeping passenger's trousers are stolen from his berth at a station through a window. The company ought to be required, also, to carry an extra pair of trousers for the relief of the passenger in case of such an embarrassing occurrence.

Denver boasts that in its public schools girls over 12 years of age are taught cooking, sewing, laundry work, the care of children, respect for husbands, the wise management of incomes and some art by which they can earn a living. But Denver omits to mention how many are graduated each year.

J. H. Gammel, while employed with the Brown Dredging Co., on July 10th, was caught by the cable to the machine he was using and pulled into the pulley. He called to the engineer in time to escape with a badly bruised limb, and considers himself very fortunate that he did not lose his limb and even his life. Mr. Gammel is now able to walk around, and expects to return to work in a few days.
