

The Bonville System

The following original letters continued from last week from those personally interested in the Bonville Ninety-Nine Year System, express the appreciation in which the System is held by those acquainted with it. We will continue to publish these letters from week to week as our space will permit. Letters of criticism as well as those of appreciation will be recognized. Address all communications to Frank Bonville, Box 1195, Portland, Oregon.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that so far as my judgment goes I believe that the Bonville 99-Year system to be the coming system for the betterment of conditions of all. This is the eighth year that I have been in business in Portland.—Wm. H. Van Doren, 1229 Union Avenue, Portland, Oregon.

I have made a careful study of Mr. Frank Bonville's 99-Year System, and believe that the adoption of this system would be a great improvement on the old system of incorporating stock companies. It would give the man with small capital the same protection that it gives the large investor. It would prevent all speculation in stocks, and thus eliminate the possibility of the small investor being squeezed out. I believe the system has much merit, and should be thoroughly investigated by all parties who may be interested in stock companies. I have had 25 years' business experience. H. C. Hardman, 1000 Belmont Street, Portland, Oregon.

I consider the Bonville System the greatest advancement in the business world which has been made in recent years. And when this system becomes thoroughly understood by the masses of the people they will demand its universal use. When the Bonville System is adopted by all corporations, there will be no corrupt political machines; stock gambling will be done away with; bank failures will be unknown; suicide among cashiers and bankers will be diminished; labor and capital will be united; and, in fact, the whole business world will be revolutionized. May its progress be rapid. R. L. Perry, Lansing, Mich.

If I had the means today I would devote all my time and energy to this cause, starting reading clubs among the women of the country, and give them to understand that the by-laws of the Bonville 99-Year System have to be read several times, besides getting acquainted with the old system and spending much time comparing the two before you thoroughly understand the good of this system. And as it is, I have given this proposition a great deal of my time, and intend to do so in the future. It is generally known that the nation is sick, and we know the cause of its sickness, and we have at last found the cure. I have been a stenographer for eighteen years, twelve of those doing public work up and down this Coast, and during that time I have had ample occasion to observe the many avenues that are left open to defeat the ends of justice by those who may wish to do so through stock transferring. I am now a public stenographer at 1019 Yeon Building, Portland, but my home is in Wenatchee Valley, Eastern Washington, where we have a ranch. Mrs. E. A. Ross.

THE DAVID OF A NEW DAY.

By J. W. Pearson.

The great movements of the world have had their birth among the ranks of the common people. When the time was ripe for a new world to be discovered, it was the son of a poor wool-comber who was chosen for the work; and of whom we read, that his idea was ridiculed by the wise men of his day. "A silly product of a visionary brain." And when later the people of the new world sought to free themselves of the unjust burdens imposed upon them by a despotic monarch, it was the common people, untrained on military tactics, who, under wise leaders and because they believed in the rights of the people to be free and independent, drove the enemy from our shores and established a republic of free people. Again: When the time came for striking the shackles from three million slaves, an Abraham Lincoln was ready for the herculean task. A man from the humble walks of life, who endured patiently the contumely of his adversaries and held steadfastly to his convictions until his work was accomplished. The propagators of new ideas have ever encountered the antagonism of the masses. Old beliefs and customs die hard. The beaten track is known, and even though it be a weary way, is preferred by those afraid of the unknown. The untried involves greater effort and may invite total disaster; hence the slow progress of new ideas.

The inventors of the first steamboat, the first railway, the Atlantic cable, the telegraph and later, the telephone, wireless telegraphy, and numerous other inventions, were hailed as fanatics, and laughed to scorn by the multitudes. But they patiently persevered, until a grateful world today is reaping the benefits of their endeavors.

Thus history repeats itself. The twentieth century is witnessing the throes of a great conflict between capital and organized labor. A crisis is rapidly approaching. Who can predict what the outcome will be? "Special privilege" has usurped the rights of the common people. The wealth of the country is controlled by the few. The rich are growing richer, the poor poorer. Why? It's the old law of "cause and effect." We are suffering the effect of a deficient financial system. A system that allows the privileged few to gain control of the world's resources is wrong. The righting of this wrong lies in the hands of the people. Not by bloodshed, but, first, by a proper understanding of the situation, and, second, by exercising the prerogative of a free people.

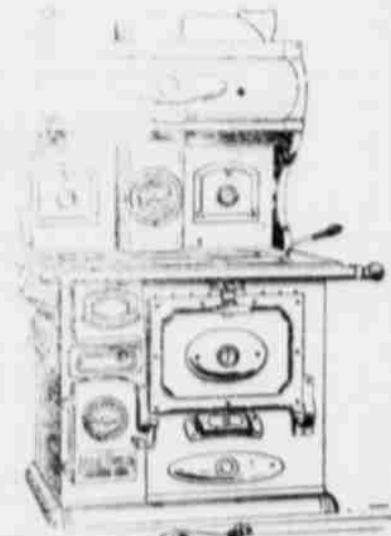

One of the foremost writers of the day on economic conditions states the situation thus: "The nation is sick. The cause of its illness is known, but, as yet, no man sufficiently great has appeared with a knowledge of the remedy and the courage to give it."

In this he is mistaken. The hour is come. The man is here, not with a remedy but a cure. And again he comes from the rank and file of the laboring classes. Not with the sword, but with a message of peace.

The Bonville Ninety-Nine Year System, by Frank Bonville, is the common ground on which all people, of all nationalities, irrespective of political affiliations or religious dogma, may meet and peacefully solve the problems now confronting us.

It is a system that takes the control from the hands of the minority and gives it to the majority. A system that gives to every man what his money earns when invested, and none may gainsay it. A system that protects the weak and erring in their property rights, and insures equal justice and a "square deal" to all. The Bonville Ninety-Nine Year System is here in the dawn of a new day.

Shall we as a nation accept this gift that means a peaceful adjustment of our social and industrial conditions? Or shall we as others before us, cling to the old beaten track and reiterate the old familiar cry "fanatic," "idle fancies," "impossible," "away with it. We will have none of it?"

Dissatisfied?

So are we. To the thoughtful citizen we urge investigation into the Bonville 99 Year System, an effective cure to the high cost of living and the unequal distribution of wealth. The "SQUARE DEAL," a handsomely illustrated book of 128 pages, with NO ADVERTISING, will tell you all about the "System." We will mail to any address for 35c. Send stamps to FRANK BONVILLE, Portland, Or.

YOU CANT BEAT OUR VALUES

That We Might Compare Values with Portland stores, we have occasionally sent members of our family there to purchase the same brand of goods we carry. And we have learned that regardless of alluring displays and attractive advertising, they cannot beat us and in many instances our prices are better. This particularly in the shoe and wearing apparel lines. But we have tried it out in our grocery line also and when both quality and price are compared, there are many times when our prices are the best.

We study the wants of our community and we increase the stock and put in all new things as fast as the trade demands.

The fall lines of Florsheim shoes and Peck suits and overcoats are on display at the Men's Toggery.

And the very latest Norfolk sweaters---the rough necks and military collars are carried at both our Men's Toggery and Ladies' Furnishings stores.

The Best Light At The Lowest Cost

ELECTRIC LIGHT is the most suitable for homes, offices, shops and other places needing light. Electricity can be used in any quantity, large or small, thereby furnishing any required amount of light. Furthermore, electric lamps can be located in any place, thus affording any desired distribution of light.

No other lamps possess these qualifications, therefore it is not surprising that electric lamps are rapidly replacing all others in modern establishments.
