Nearly every one has childhood memories of pulling an old edition of book down off the center table and becoming lost in awe and admiration of its allknowingness. One has a suspicion that the author decided the question of what to put in and what to leave out by putting in everything he could think of. A few of the subjects treated are: Shorthand, letter writing for all occasions, language of flowers, etiquette, commercial forms, interest tables, highest buildings, facial expression, presidential elections and results, animals and fruits of all countries.
