Plant Shade Trees

Gresham is far behind the time in the matter of tree planting. A young growing city with the good prospects that this one has should give especial attention to the beautifying of its streets. This can best be done now by a systematic setting out of shade and ornamental trees along our streets. All beautiful cities have given attention to this, invariably early in their history, and now attract the well-to-do home-seeker and suburban resident. Plans should be formulated and each property owner work to further the same along his street or avenue, in his district, and in the city at large, so far as possible.—Gresham Outlook.

This would apply to St. Johns with equal force. Next to fine residences with well kept lawns, well paved streets and walks, and buildings or architectural beauty, nothing can add more to the attractiveness of a city or town than shade trees, whether along the curb or upon the lawn. What is more delightful than the approach to some of our Eastern towns through long lines of trees which furnish shade from the hot summer sun? Did you ever see a city or town that was called beautiful which did not have many tree lined streets? Plant shade trees and still further enhance the wondrous beauty of St. Johns. And it is not a bad idea to plant fruit trees in your gardens, as well.

The Only Abstainers

Dogs and horses seem to be about the only animals that are total abstainers. Performing bears can easily be taught to acquire the tobacco habit and once they have it they do not give it up unless they are absolutely forced to do so. Goats, on the other hand, appear to prefer the cigarette and take kindly to smoking it from the first. Dromedaries and camels likewise are most addicted to the weed, and when they are under its influence can be made to do almost anything.

The driver carries a triangular piece of wood which is pierced at one end like a cigar holder. This is inserted in the beast's mouth, the cigar then lit and pressed into the hole. Immediately the camel closes his eyes and puffs away through his mouth and nostrils until the cigar is entirely consumed.

It seems to enjoy to the full the experience and also to derive from it a decided stimulant, for though it may have been ready to drop from fatigue before, it will plod on afterwards for miles. It is not easy to break it of the habit, either. Camels have been known to starve themselves deliberately after they have once acquired the taste if they are not given their smoke at regular intervals.—Exchange.
