As is usually the case in mid winter, there are now in Portland a large number of unemployed men, idle from necessity and not from choice. Some of them have had experience on farms, are willing to work and would make competent farm hands. Many of them are anxious to go to the country for employment, and if they knew where to go would be glad to make the trip. Farmers throughout the state desiring help are requested to communicate with the commercial club at Portland. The latter organization is in touch with the Y. M. C. A. and other clean employment bureaus, and will refer only such men as appear to be honest, capable and deserving. There are some married couples who would like a chance to work on farms, also women who would make good domestic servants.

Park Committee

Prof. C. H. Boyd, who was authorized at the last mass meeting on the park question to appoint a committee of twelve, including himself, to inaugurate a campaign of education toward the securing of needed parks at the right prices, has appointed the citizens named below. As the names and addresses testify, care was exercised in the selection, and the various sections of the city are represented by able and conservative citizens, nearly all of whom have held or are holding public positions, and should be able to weigh public opinion, and at the same time keep the future of the city in mind. We believe all of them are property owners, also. The committee:

Fathers' Day Services

Father's Day was observed in the Evangelical church last Sunday. There was a full house. A beautifully painted motto greeted the audience. The wording was arranged by Mrs. George Hall, the Sunday School superintendent, as follows: "Here's to My Father, My Truest and Oldest Friend." The G. A. R.'s and Boy Scouts were present in a body, Mayor Bredeeson and others were present.

The motto was the theme for the sermon by the pastor. The text was Gen. 22:7. He likened the boy to a question mark, an interrogator that will not be satisfied with the assertion that the earth rests on a big rock, and that rock on another big rock, etc., until he finds out that it is rock all the way down, at least. He said that "father" implies Deity and special providence, that one good father is worth two good mothers, arguing from the scarcity, that to become a man in the truest sense one must be married and anchored to five or six promising responsibilities, that the child's connecting link with the outside world is the father, and that it is their life more than precept that gives unction to the boy's life, that the high tide of the father's love emotions are engraved on the boy's heart never to be forgotten.

He said that the time to answer the child's question was when he asks it. The question may be piercing to you, but it is vital to the child. Many fathers depend too much on the mother to direct the child's life. More children should have fathers like the little girl who said to her weeping mamma, "Don't cry because I won't take the doctors' medicine; when papa comes home he'll make me take it." He paid a tribute to the fathers of our country as represented by G. A. R.'s, referring to their achievements and honors followed by years of suffering; quoting the words of Gen. Pickett when he reported to Gen. Lee, at Gettysburg: "There, General, lies my noble division, slaughtered." Said Lee, "You and your men have this day covered yourselves with glory," and Pickett replied, "Not all the glory in the world, General Lee, can atone for the widows and orphans this day has made."

He spoke words of encouragement to the "City Dads," and exhorted the people to be prompt in supporting every good movement inaugurated by the City Council, inasmuch as the forces that are interested in tearing down our homes are ever insistent with their demands on the law making body.

He encouraged the Boy Scouts by citing the honors that are bestowed on the old soldiers as a result of their sacrifice for the good of mankind. He exhorted daughters to companion their fathers more and fathers to indulge their daughters more in these affectionate demonstrations.

In closing he called attention to Him who was sacrificed for a lost world of mankind. Him that taught the world to say, "Our Father," and emphasizing the brotherhood among men.---Reporter.

A Scenic Playground

Co-incident with this return from the east, A. S. Benson announced that his father, S. Benson, the noted Oregon timberman, capitalist and good roads advocate, had bought about 220 acres of land embracing the famous Gordon Falls, and would make of it a scenic playground, where the people could go in the summer months and see the beauties with which nature has endowed Oregon.

The Gordon Falls which are in close proximity to Multnomah Falls, are considered by many to be even finer than the latter, because the approach is more beautiful and the falls themselves, even though not so great in volume, are more picturesque. At a height of about 1300 feet

Petition Solicitation

To the Editor: It has been quite generally agreed that under the system of paid circulation of initiative and referendum petitions two evils exist---the submission of many measures for which there is no popular demand, and the forging of signature. To remove these evils I shall propose an initiative measure prohibiting payment for circulation of petitions, but placing no restrictions upon the right of the people to circulate petitions for any measure in which they feel an interest.

One of the fundamental purposes of the Oregon system is to increase the power of men and decrease the power of money. I am surprised, therefore, to find that there are some sincere advocates of better government who oppose the plan of prohibiting paid circulation of petitions. Most of those who oppose my bill acknowledge that it is right in principle but say it will not work satisfactorily in practice. I contend that if it is right in principle it will ultimately be adopted and will work in practice.

An initiative petition is supposed to represent the desire of eight per cent of the voters. It does no such thing. It represents merely the expenditure of a certain amount of money. Possibly circulation of petitions serves to notify about ten per cent of the voters that the measure is being proposed, but if that is the end to be gained, it certainly could be done more effectively by expending the money in the printing and circulation of copies of the bill which voters could read, rather than in securing signatures of voters to a petition which few take the time to read.

The adoption of my suggested bill would make the petition represent public opinion, for the number of volunteer circulators would be in proportion to the extent of public desire for the measure.

I admit that so long as the custom of paying circulators continues, practically every measure must be initiated in that manner, but I am confident the time will come when the duties of citizenship in procuring and protecting desired laws under the initiative and referendum will be performed without special compensation.

The hiring of paid circulators for measures or candidates is no less representative than the hiring of workers or vehicles on election day, which have both been prohibited by the corrupt practices act.

Jonathan Bourne, Jr.

There is an enormous punch bowl, where beavers have been seen at work, while the last falls are about 650 feet in height.

Mr. Benson's intention is to beautify the place something along the lines of the famous Busch gardens at Pasadena and to allow the public absolutely free access at any and all times, though maintaining possession of the property. In this connection the ground in the front of the falls will admit of higher development than that at Multnomah Falls, where the spray in the winter would permeate the walls of any structure that might be erected there.

Topics at the Baptist church Sunday: Morning, "Hindrances to Power;" evening, "What is My Name?" Anthems, "Our Father Who Art in Heaven;" by Lehrer; "Stand Up For Jesus," by Beazley. All invited.
