An I. W. W. speaker on the street corner Monday evening got unduly excited. Some one evidently told him that the Review made the statement in last week's issue that the speakers at the previous meeting should all be in jail. Of course such a remark did not appear, nor anything like it. However, the speaker assumed that his garbled information was correct and challenged the editor to a debate on the street corner next Monday evening. The editor must decline, however much he appreciates the kind invitation, as he is, unfortunately, not a public speaker. But rather than wholly disappoint the speaker, he will agree to debate any proposition the speaker cares to take up in the Review, provided some regard is given to the length of same. If he wants to discuss the proposition that "all churches should be wiped off the map" or "patriotism is sheer nonsense," we will do our best to convince him of the error of his ways. As a matter of fact the Review made no "militant" remarks concerning the speakers in any issue. They have a right to talk until they reach the point of slander or traitorous remarks; then they should be prevented from talking farther. Slander and treason are culpable offenses and should never be tolerated on American soil. If the I. W. W., Socialist or any other organization confine their speakers to temperate and reasonable language none will object.
