The Review is entered at post office in Portland, Oregon, as mail matter of the second class under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

One admirable thing about a farm is that about as many people as can crowd on it can make a living, if they all work.

Anybody who wants to be a real rival of Thomas A. Edison is hereby advised to turn his attention to a U-boat extermiator rather than perpetual motion.

Wearing a flag on your collar may be all right, but how about the feelings of the laundress who is obliged to throw the flag into a tub with a lot of soiled clothing.

A bill to put the lumber industry on an eight-hour day basis was introduced Monday by Senator Jones, of Washington, and referred to the commerce committee. It would prohibit interstate shipments of lumber products upon which there has been labor of more than eight hours a day.

Dollar wheat used to be the fond hope of the farmer, but now he is making a big holler because the price is only $2.05 instead of more. It seems hard to satisfy human nature. "More more," is the constant cry. It is the cry of the millionaire as well as the man of moderate means. There seems to be no limit. When one million is secured another is desired. The richest man in the world is still grasping for more. Why is it so?

The strike situation is still standing pat. The steel workers have united with the wooden ship builders, and with the exception of the Columbia Shipbuilding Co., and the Coast Shipbuilding Co., all the ship plants of the city are practically at a standstill. It is expected, however, that an agreement will be reached this week. The striking workmen, apparently, are anxious to go back to work, but they want their demands acceded to before so doing. President Wilson has become interested in an early adjustment, and the probabilities are that matters will be so arranged that work will resume not later than the first of next week. The hope is general that it may be so.

In conversation with the local baker in regard to the charge of ten cents for a loaf of bread that formerly sold for half that price, he said under present conditions there is really not as much profit in a ten cent loaf as there was in the five cent loaf of former times. Then, he stated, flour could be secured at $4.60 per barrel, sugar at $5.40 and lard, and other ingredients were much cheaper in price. He said when people registered a vigorous protest on price of bread in the belief that the baker was realizing an immense profit, they were laboring under a misapprehension. As a matter of fact he said at the present time he is making and selling bread at actual cost, realizing his profit on pastry. So there seems to be two sides to the loaf of bread question.

The newspapers of the west have a good friend in Senator Chas. L. McNary of Oregon. Publishers have brought up the subject of receiving pay for advertising the next government bond issue. The commodity for sale by the publisher is advertising space and from this he makes his living. Without thousands of columns of news and editorials will be run on the bond issue free of charge. The steel manufacturer is paid for his product, the farmer is well paid for his produce, the munition manufacturer is paid, the railroad is paid, the ship owners are paid and the money to foot all these bills comes through the assistance of the papers in floating the bonds and the publishers figure that the only commodity they have for sale should be paid for when it is used. Senator McNary has in no uncertain manner pointed out that the publisher is as justly entitled to payment for his advertising space as any other industry for its product, and if provision is made for paying the publishers for future advertising it will be largely due to Senator McNary's effort. He emphasized particularly that the rural press which reaches the masses of the people should not be expected to do all this work gratis.—Industrial News Bureau.

"You do not need to pay until I get through," said the dentist to the man to whom he was about to administer gas, as that person was fumbling through the contents of his pocketbook. "I know that," said the man. "I was only counting my money."

An assistant barber who had been working for the day at the Coffey barber shop on North Jersey street last Saturday met with quite a mishap. While Mr. Coffey was working at the chair he noticed a pool of blood on the floor. Not comprehending where it came from he asked his assistant about it. He replied that he did not know, but on looking down at his feet he noticed the blood oozing out at one of his feet. It was then discovered that a vein had burst in the barber's leg. A physician was called and the injury cared for.

In the End

Last night I dreamed that o'er
The brightness of my sunny world
A shadow passed.
So dense, so deep, it hid
My noon-day sun.
I cried unto my brother worlds,
"A light! A light!"
Of all, replied not one.
Not one, Oh Lord! I scarce
Had breathed the word,
Nor e'en had voiced
A plea. When lo!
A Presence bore me from
The trampled sod,
Eternity engulfed my soul,
I lay at rest.
For in the end is God.
—Meg Merrilies.

An exchange gets off the following: "There is a woman living in West Virginia who has been married three times. Her maiden name was Partidge, her first husband was named Robins, her second Sparrow, the present Quale. There are now two young robins, one sparrow and three little quales in the family. One grandfather was a Swan and another a Jay, but he's dead now and a bird of Paradise. They live out on Hawk Avenue, Eagleville, Canary Island, and the fellow who wrote this is a Lyre and a relative of the family."
