

THE Bargain Counter

If you are looking for bargains it will be well to scan the propositions under this heading each week:

Cockereels—$1.50 each, ten to sell. O. A. C. stock from eggs gotten this Spring from the Oregon Agricultural College, which sends out only eggs from hens with records of 200 eggs or more per hen, producing cockereels that will increase the laying quality of any flock far beyond the usual. It is said the O. A. C. cannot supply the demand at $2.00 each. Call at this office for name and address of owner, who plans leaving St. Johns.

$175—Cash—Overland, 8-passenger Automobile. In good condition, tires new or practically new. Just the thing for a workman who resides some distance from his work, or for family use. This bargain will go quick, so hurry. Call at this office for name and address of owner who has no further use for it and needs the room it occupies.

$275—Blacksmith Shop. Thoroughly equipped for all kinds of blacksmithing. Worth more than $400. Best location in St. Johns. A splendid opportunity. If you have a blacksmith friend looking for a location, tell him about it. $75 cash balance on easy terms. For name and address of owner, who is now engaged in other business, call at this office.

75c—Typewriter Paper, 500 sheets. Good quality and just the thing for students. A bargain at the price. On sale at this office.

$75.00—Purcell Safe, 41 in. high, 31 in. wide, 25 in. deep, weight about 1600 pounds. In good condition and worth double the price. Call at this office.

$12.50—Smith Premier Typewriter. Good condition; the cost of renting a machine for five months would pay for this. Call at this office.

$15.00—Lady's Ranger Bicycle. Call at this office.

$25.00—Chief Bicycle. This office.

$15.00—Baker Shot Gun, double barrel. Cost $100 when new. Call at this office.

$10.00—Winchester Rifle, 38-50 cal. Call at this office.

DEATH IN THE EXPLOSION.

A Tragedy of What Was the Largest Geyser in the World.

While the Waimangu geyser, in New Zealand, lasted it was the largest in the world. Its name, "black water" in the Maori tongue, came from the dark column of water and debris that it threw up at every eruption. Stones and boiling water, accompanied by vast clouds of steam, rose 900 to 1,500 feet at irregular intervals twenty or twenty-two times a month. At other times the water of the Waimangu lay in a cup shaped depression about 20 feet deep, 749 feet wide and 492 feet long.

Several hours before each eruption the lake would begin to boil violently and to send off dense clouds of steam. Loud subterranean rumblings were heard. When the final explosion came the whole lake, mingled with material from below, rose bodily. Its torrential fall was destructive to a large area round about, and the slopes near by are still furrowed by the rivers of water that coursed down them. The column of water was thrown up about four times as high as the Giant geyser, now the largest in the Yellowstone park, throws its water, and the area of its base was about two and a half acres in comparison with the few square rods of the American geyser.

Close by the geyser is a hill surmounted by an iron hut, about 450 feet above the pool, where observers took refuge during eruptions. One day in August, 1903, a party was on the slope below this building watching the boiling pool. As the approach of the explosion became more imminent the guide warned them back, and all except four obeyed. The mother of one of the young ladies called to her, but she wanted to take another photograph and answered, "Just a moment, mother." During that moment the eruption occurred, and the disobedient young lady and her three companions were swept to a tragic death.—Youth's Companion.

A Mighty Monolith.

A writer in the Christian Herald says that he had heard great stories about the pyramids, but that after seeing the stones at Baalbek those of the great pyramids looked like children's building blocks. In the quarry is a stone on the upper surface of which a troop of cavalry would stand. It is squared on five sides, but not yet detached from the ledge.

The Arab legend is that a female giant was carrying the stone when she heard her baby cry. She dropped it there, and no one has moved it since. If that baby had not cried for its mother there would be today in the walls of the temple a stone seventy feet long and fifteen feet square. Doubtless it will some day justify the amount of work done upon it. At present it helps six hotels, a dozen curio shops, a score of muleteers and a station master.

Pilot and Engineer.

Care, the utmost care, is taken on the Hudson river and Long Island sound night boats with their brilliant display of searchlights never to let a ray be thrown upon a locomotive engineer at his lover or the pilot of another craft at his post. On rail and water engineer and pilot must be kept in darkness, as one flash of a brilliant electric searchlight would blind them temporarily and they might go unheeding by a danger signal.—New York Telegram.

Costly Curds.

The Empress Catherine, noticing that the beautiful Mlle. Potocka, who had lately come to court, had no pearls, immediately commanded a fancy dress ball, to which the girl was bidden to come as a milkmaid. Then while Mlle. Potocka was dancing the empress slipped a superb necklace of pearls into the pail she carried and at her exclamation of wonder said, "It is only the milk which has curdled."

Difficult Indeed.

"There must be a good many interesting and difficult problems in the life of a statesman," ventured the loyal constituent.

"There are," responded Congressman Hammfart. "When the statesman has to make one lone job answer the needs of ten deserving patriots I am here to remark that the problem practically defies solution."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Quite Natural.

"Why didn't you stay and play with your little sister, as I told you to?"

"I did."

"Willie, how can you say that? You went away and played with the boys."

"I know. We were playing house, and I was the husband, and I was just staying out late the way pa does."—Detroit Free Press.
