In the passing of Peter Autzen this community, especially, has suffered a distinct loss. He was a man whom it was a pleasure to know. Of keen intellect, genial disposition, helpful, of a kindly and generous nature, he was a prince among men. No matter when or where one met Peter Autzen he was always the same—pleasant, genial, and in good humor. No one ever went to him in distress in vain. His helping hand was ever ready to relieve destitution. He was keenly interested in the growth and development of St. Johns, and he devoted much of his time toward this end. He was possessed of splendid business ability and judgment, and his dealings with his fellow men were all of the fairest and squarest, and he never took advantage of any man. Few men had more friends than he, and it is with the deepest regret they now realize that his kindly and familiar figure will no more be seen upon this earth. The world is the better for having had men like Peter Autzen live in it.

Peter Autzen was born of Danish parents May 1, 1854, in Schleswig-Holstein when that province was under Danish rule. During the War of 1866 between Denmark and Germany, young Peter, though only eleven years of age, was sent alone by his father with a four horse team to deliver supplies to Danish soldiers who were then near the German border to resist the invasion of their country by the German army. In an early conflict, German arms prevailed, resulting in a rout of the Danes and choking the highways with fleeing men and wreckage of war. Much to his father's surprise and delight, young Peter was the only teamster to return with his load of provisions—all others overturned and abandoned their wagons in an effort to escape capture. From that time on, he nursed a hatred for the German military rule.

Responsive to his innate desire for absolute freedom of action, Mr Autzen came to America soon after reaching mature manhood and swore allegiance to the United States as soon as he was in position to do so.

On August 6th, 1882, he was married to Miss Anna Wegner at San Francisco, and immediately departed with his bride for the Gray's Harbor Country in the employ of the Simpson Lumber Company. The young couple began housekeeping at Hoquiam, Wash., in the fall of 1882. Three children were born to them. The first died when three years of age; their daughter Alice, Mrs. Morris, died in August, 1917. His wife, and son Thomas, survive him.

The loyalty, hospitality and joviality of Mr. and Mrs. Autzen, soon won for them a host of friends, who, from 1890 to 1897, insisted upon showing their appreciation by impressing Mr. Autzen into public office. He, during that time, with the hearty approval of the public, filled with fidelity and credit, the respective offices of Collector of Customs for the Port of Gray's Harbor, Post Master and Mayor of Hoquiam, and County Commissioner of Chelan County, Washington. Many courtesies were offered him while in public office in the nature of free railroad transportation, etc., which was customary in those times, but they were always politely and unceremoniously declined—the reason being that he did not want to feel embarrassed should it become his duty to withhold public concessions that might be requested of him. These acts, with others, indicative of his unflinching integrity, soon earned for him the name of "Honest Pete."

In 1897, Mr. Autzen, in company with Mr. W. L. Adams, now president of the First National Bank of Hoquiam, Wash., and W. D. Mack organized the Mack Logging Co., which had for its object the buying of timber and logging. That was his first real business adventure, and it was in the administration of the affairs of that company that he first demonstrated his wonderful executive powers and business acumen. Under his leadership and push, the business of the company succeeded far beyond the most sanguine hopes of his associates and friends. Mr. Mack died in 1903. Mr. Autzen and Mr. Adams purchased his interest and became sole owners of the company. In 1906, they discontinued active logging operations and conveyed their timber lands to a corporation formed by them under the name of the Keystone Timber Co., which still exists and holds valuable tracts of timber both in Oregon and Washington. Mr. Autzen was also a stockholder and trustee in the Grays Harbor Lumber Co., which operates a large saw mill in Grays Harbor. He has been a stockholder in the First National Bank of Hoquiam since its organization, in 1890, and was, for many years an active director of that institution.

He came to Oregon in 1906, bought an interest in the Portland Manufacturing Co., which up to that time had operated in a very limited measure; he and his son Thomas soon acquired the entire interest of that company and set about for its improvement. One night he was awakened from his sleep and told that his mill had burned down. His answer was: "Why make a fuss about it this time of night? I will begin rebuilding as soon as it gets light." He then retired and was soon fast asleep. This incident was characteristic of the man. He was never daunted by adversity, nor did he waste his strength by unnecessary worry. His factory was rebuilt as soon as conditions would permit, and has ever since, like all other enterprises over which he exercised control, been maintained in the highest state of modern efficiency.

He was stockholder and director in the Nicolai Door Mfg. Co., in the Peninsula Ship Building Co., Peninsula Security Co., stockholder in the United States National Bank of Portland, and, to a greater or less extent, in many other corporations.

Against his personal pleasure, he served one term as Councilman of the City of St. Johns and for several years as President of the St. Johns Commercial Club, and was a member of the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Soon after coming to Oregon he purchased an interest in the Peninsula National Bank. In June, 1913, honored that institution by becoming its President, which office he held, with the unanimous approbation of the stockholders, board of directors and patrons of the bank until the day of his death.

Mr. Autzen was no slacker either in public or private life. He knew his responsibility and never evaded it. He loved his adopted country and was appreciative of its freedom and of the opportunities it afforded; he contributed unsparingly and far beyond the requirements of him to its needs. After contributing to the first Red Cross fund, he was heard to say: "What I have, I made in the United States; when the Government wants what I have saved, it may have it, and such services as I can give in its defense." He knew what was required of him and what to require of others; he did his full duty and expected those answerable to him to do theirs; he measured men by three rules—honesty, common sense and willingness and ability to work. His ability to survey the qualities in men, read their characters, calculate with almost mathematical certainty the result of action, made him an invaluable asset to the various enterprises with which he was associated. He was a bountiful provider and saw to it that his family was made comfortable; was loyal and affectionate to his friends, just and considerate to his employees, and fair to all with whom he dealt. He towered high above the average man in physical and mental strength and strength of character. Yet, he was democratic in taste and action; was a lover and friend of children and delighted in the companionship of young people. He loved the freedom of outdoor life and the beauties of nature as the eagle loves the clear skies. He was inspiration to his friends, and those who knew him best can truly say: "In his death the world has lost a man."

Has Seen Much Service

One of the most interesting employees of our yard is Roy McCabe, Lance Corporal of the 241st Overseas Battalion, who recently returned to this country, discharged from service because of wounds. Corporal McCabe has a jagged scar in his forehead where a giant Hun endeavored to end his career with a bayonet. The Hun is now dead. On the bridge of his nose is another scar caused by a German bullet. He was also wounded in the leg. Corporal McCabe in Belgium was an eye witness to the crucifixion of his pal. According to Mr. McCabe, the two, who had traveled together for nine years, became separated at the battle of Ypres. After the battle McCabe found his companion crucified to a church door. The body was badly mutilated but life was not yet extinct. With tender care McCabe and his companion rescued their comrade and as they knelt beside his remains vowed never to take another German prisoner. Until the day of his discharge McCabe kept his vow, and is now eager to return and further avenge the death of his best friend. Besides having participated in many of the great battles of France, McCabe saw service in Mexico, having fought with the Carranza forces for several months. He also took part in the Brazilian revolution in 1910. In addition to being wounded, McCabe was gassed three times, and is still suffering from the effects of the chemical, as well as from shell shock caused by exploding shrapnel.—From "Going Some," local ship paper.

Base Ball Notes

The Grant Smith-Porter club and the Foundation team played off their tie for first honors in the first half of the series last Saturday afternoon on Vaughn street grounds, the latter winning by the close score of 2 to 1. The local club journeyed to St. Helens June 23rd and was defeated in a well played and exciting game there by a score of 4 to 3. The Cornfoot and Peninsula teams crossed bats at the local grounds June 23d, the former winning out by a score of 10 to 3. Owing to only one umpire officiating and he not working behind the bat when there was a runner on, as should have been the case, the Peninsula got the worst of it on two foul decisions. Two games will be pulled off at the local grounds June 30th. The first will be between Supple-Ballin and Columbia River; the second game between Cornfoot and the locals. The games begin at 1:30; gates open 12:30. A big attendance is anticipated.

The local newspaper should be found in every home. No child will grow up in ignorance who can be taught to appreciate the home paper. It is the stepping stone of intelligence in all those matters not to be learned in books. Give your children a foreign paper which contains not one word about any person, place or thing which they ever saw, or perhaps ever heard of, and how can you expect them to be interested? But let them have the home paper and read of persons whom they meet and places with which they are familiar, and soon an interest is awakened which increases with every arrival of the local paper. Thus a habit of reading is formed, and those children will read the paper all their lives and become intelligent men and women, a credit to their ancestors, strong in their knowledge of the world as it is today.—Exchange.

"GRAPES OF GOLD" NEW TYPE OF LECTURE

H. V. Adams Presents Out-of-the-Ordinary Lecture at Chautauqua.

H. V. Adams comes to Chautauqua with a lecture decidedly away from "the beaten path" of Chautauqua subjects. It is known as "Grapes of Gold," and has been given throughout the United States for the last ten years with unusual success. It deals with the power of suggestion, built around the ancient proverb, "As a man thinketh, so is he." In this lecture, Mr. Adams discusses the power of a man's self-chosen thoughts to make for character, personal happiness and physical well-being. He shows the curative power of wholesome thinking; the necessity of thinking big thoughts if we would achieve big things. It is neither a sermon nor a dry discussion, but a scientific subject, made clear and interesting and well seasoned with wit and humor.

CHICAGO CARTOONIST AT CHAUTAUQUA

Formerly With "Inter-Ocean" and "Record-Herald."

Ned Woodman, cartoonist and humorist, who will entertain Chautauqua audiences this year, was for four years a cartoonist on the art staff of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He has contributed many cartoons to "Life," "Judge" and other magazines of national reputation.

Ned Woodman.

But he found his great field a few years ago when he first appeared upon the platform. Since that time he has been in constant demand for Chautauqua work during the summer seasons. Woodman talks while he draws and illuminates his lecture not only with his clever cartooning, but with fine flashes of humor. As an eastern daily says, "Woodman illustrates his stories with cartoons and illustrates his cartoons with stories." His program entitles, amuses, informs, educates.
