MEN OF IMMORTAL MEMORY

Many of the Works of the Greek Philosophers, Plato and Aristotle, Are Still Preserved.

Plato (427-347 B. C.), the celebrated Greek philosopher, taught that the true source of knowledge is the reason, observes an exchange. According to his teaching, we come to consciousness through innate ideas developed by contact with the outer world through senses. He distinguished between empirical knowledge and reason, and divided philosophy into logic, metaphysics and morals. He was the first to attempt the construction of philosophic language; to develop an abstract idea of knowledge and science; to state logically the properties of matter, form, substance, accident, cause and effect, reality and appearance; to describe the divinity as a being essentially good, and tell of his moral attributes. He taught that matter is an eternal and indomitable principle; that God is the supreme intelligence, incorporeal, without beginning, end or change, and that the soul of man is immortal. Aristotle (384-322 B. C.), another celebrated Greek philosopher, was the pupil of Plato and the teacher of Alexander the Great. He makes logic the instrument by which all general knowledge is obtained. He enlarged the limits of philosophy to include all sciences except history. He taught that nature is a machine, active through deity or a first cause.

CATFISH CLIMB SMOOTH WALL

Certain Species Equipped With a Peculiar Suction Apparatus That Makes Feat Really Easy.

An interesting account of the climbing catfish of Colombia (Arges marmoratus) was published a few years ago by R. D. Johnson. These fish can climb, by means of suction apparatus, not only up the steeply-inclined bed of mountain torrent, but even up a smooth, vertical surface. Mr. Johnson saw some of them climb a vertical distance of 18 feet in half an hour, up a wall of rock over which trickled a thin film of water.

In connection with a recent publication of this article, G. K. Noble states that other species of fish are known to climb in the same manner. Several of these occur in the Himalaya. Nemachilus rupicola, and perhaps other species of mountain cyprinids, adhere to the rocks by means of their smooth ventral skin and enlarged lips. The silurid genera Pseudocheneis and Glyptosternum cling by means of a well-developed abdominal sucker. The mountain torrents of the Himalaya form the nursery for many species of frogs. Their tadpoles, like the fish, have become adapted to their location; some cling by means of their lips and ventral musculature, while others possess a well-developed ventral sucker.—Scientific American.

Glue Stronger Than Steel.

A new field for wood has been opened by the use of what is called ply-wood and glue made from the blood of the animals killed at the slaughter house and of the casein, obtained from milk.

Remarkable sturdiness under all conditions has been shown by this combination. The combination was first thought of in connection with the manufacture of airplanes.

Thin sheets of wood are laid one over the other with dry sheets of paper coated on both sides with the new glue. The mass is then heated under pressure and the result is that a structure is formed which is stronger than steel and has many other advantages over metal.

Panels were glued together with these and tested in boiling water for eight hours. At the expiration of this time none of the pieces showed any separation of the piles.

Something Special Every Day

Beginning March 1st

On Tuesday, March First we are to begin putting on some epoch making sales in our Dry Goods Department. Every day we are going to give you at least one item of merchandise that is reasonable, new and desirable at just cost; some days less than cost.

We will be frank with you and tell you it is the same plan used by the big department stores with this exception. When you come in to take advantage of our offer we are not going to bore you to get you to take something else "just as good" and we shall endeavor to have a large enough supply of whatever the "Special" happens to be so that you will not be disappointed.

The "Special" will be announced on a streamer across the door the day it is put on.

It will work something like this—the first day may be gingham day and you will be able to get your gingham for seven or eight cents, perhaps ten cents less than regular. The next day we may put on thread or fasteners. Another day our fancy voiles, another day shoes, another hosiery. Another day sheets and pillow cases. But each day you may be assured one bargain.

But it will be necessary for you to understand that the "Special" will be for just one day at a time. If you get left one day, you will have to wait for that to come on again or else pay the regular price.

We are expecting to make it interesting for you.
