

LAST FATALITY IN DISPUTE

When Determined, Monument Will Be Erected on Spot Where Unfortunate Soldier Died.

When was the last man killed in the war? This is the latest question asked by the French literary journal, Renaissance. It promises to be taken up seriously by the allied nations, each of which has hitherto considered that the honor belonged to it. The British declare that a few minutes before eleven o'clock on the morning of the armistice a colonel of machine gunners in the British army received a stray bullet, but it is doubtful whether this bullet came from a German sniper or from a party of moppers up. At any rate, the British case is considered outclassed. Veterans' associations in allied countries are being asked to send in corroborated details of incidents likely to aid in solving the problem, which the Renaissance assures its readers is just as important as is the identity of the first man killed in the war, the latter honor, of course, belonging to the French soldier who crossed the German frontier without knowing war had been declared and was shot during an altercation with a German customs agent and a squad of German infantry. Once the identity of the last man killed in the war is established, a monument will be raised to commemorate the fatality and the soldier who lost his life at the moment of victory.
