

NOT AN EASY OCCUPATION

Deep-Sea Diver May With Much Truth Be Said Constantly to "Walk With Death."

How does a deep-sea diver feel when he puts on his diving suit? Capt. C. A. W. Monckton tells us in "Some Experiences of a New Guinea Resident Magistrate" that the feeling is by no means pleasant.

The moment the face glass is screwed tight, he says, and the air pump begins to work, the diver feels that he has a grievance. As he descends the feeling becomes more positive until he is in a fury of rage against everyone in general and usually against one person in particular.

At the bottom he spends much of his time wondering how soon the dress can be taken off so that he can injure the person against whom he has the imaginary grievance. However, the moment the face glass is removed, and the diver breathes the ordinary air, the bad temper leaves him, and he wonders what caused his anger.

LEGEND MANY CENTURIES OLD

Story of the "Wandering Jew" Has Been Common to All Peoples Since the Crucifixion.

It is an ancient legend, that of the Wandering Jew, and the earliest mention I can find of it is said to be an account related by an Armenian bishop in 1228. It has been exploited by the novelist, the playwright, the poet and the historian, for it is a subject replete with fascinating thrills.

Tales have differed as to the identity of the Wandering Jew. One relates that he was Karpaphios, a doorkeeper in the judgment hall of Pontius Pilate, who, when the Man of Sorrows was passing through, struck him, saying, "Go on faster, Jesus," and the reply was, "I am going, but thou shalt tarry till I come again." A German legend takes it up and relates that in the year 1547 the Jew appeared in Hamburg, giving his name as Ahasuerus, saying that he had been a shoemaker in Jerusalem at the time of the crucifixion.

And this tradition has it that the condemned man, going from country to country, speaking all languages, wandered throughout the centuries. Eugene Sue depicts this artisan of Jerusalem as pale, with the single line of his black brows crossing from temple to temple, ever urged by the avenging Deity, who cries, "Go on, go on," but shows him as repentant and with hope of final rest.—Frederic Hahn in the Chicago Daily News.

Violin Strings.

Each string in a violin is of a different thickness, according to the tone and tension required. The fourth string is covered with fine wire, either a white metal or real silver, hence it is often called the "silver string." Violas, violoncellos and double-basses have each two covered strings, the object being to insure a sufficient gravity of tone without having too clumsy a material. The covered strings on the guitar are upon a basis of silk instead of catgut. The best gut comes from Italy, which has been famous for centuries for this product. Strings are carefully selected and graded as to size so that they shall be uniform. The larger strings for the bigger instruments are stretched on frames for three or four days. The covered strings are finished on a special lathe which covers them with fine silk or fine silver-plated copper wire, or even silver.—Scientific American.

Not So "Looney" After All.

A shrewd lunatic, an inmate of an asylum, had a shilling which he hid one day in a hole. The attendant was watching him, so he went after him to the place, took the shilling and put a shilling in its stead. Next day the patient came to see his shilling, and when he examined it he said: "You must be in consumption. You're getting so small and pale."

He put it back into the hole.

The attendant, who had been watching, went again, took the shilling and put a sovereign in its place. On the following day, when the lunatic came to see his coin, he looked at it and said: "I fear you have yellow jaundice this time. I must take you home and attend you." So saying, he put the sovereign in his pocket and kept it. The warden is still studying the profit and loss account.—London Ideas.

Sufficient unto the Day.

The subject given them being the future, one schoolboy wrote, "We are not to be anxious about the future, as the future will come in time." Another youngster cogitated this gem: "We are taught in the Sermon on the Mount not to think of the future, because the evil we do in one day is sufficient."—Boston Transcript.

GAVE WORLD POWER TO ROME

Conquering Legions Carried the Eagles to Victory in Practically Every Known Land.

In the early days of its history the republic of Rome consisted of a city, but wars of conquest extended its dominion over the whole Italian peninsula. For centuries only the citizens of Rome had a vote in the election of the ruler. The republic was a conquering state, and extended Roman power as far north and west as Spain, the British Isles, Belgium, and Germany, and as far east as the Black Sea. At first the army consisted of a levy of citizens. As Rome came to need more than one army at once and warfare grew more complex a standing force was built up, and it was largely because of its superior equipment and discipline that the armies of the barbarians, often superior in numbers, were defeated and crushed.

The unit of the Roman army of that time was the legio, translated into English, the legion. It corresponded to a regiment in our army but was much larger, for a Roman legion contained from 4,000 to 6,000 men. They were heavy infantry with some cavalry. The legions comprised the first-class troops, while the auxilia, or auxiliaries, were the troops of the second class.

At the time of the death of the first emperor, Augustus, in the year 14 A. D., the Roman army consisted of 25 such legions. This heavy infantry lost much of its importance when the barbarian invasions altered the character of ancient warfare and made cavalry a more important arm than infantry in the late Third and the Fourth centuries.

The word legion came to express any large number with the accessory ideas of order and subordination.

HIGH VALUE OF SAND BATHS

From Findings of Danish Medical Men, It Would Seem Their Importance is Underestimated.

From the earliest history of man baths of hot sand have been used to relieve bone and joint diseases, especially gout and rheumatism. Faber and Plum, in a Danish medical journal, tabulate the findings during and after the sand bath in a number of cases as regards the pulse, respiration, temperature at different points of the body and the blood pressure, urine and changes in weight as well as the effect on the pathologic condition. Their conclusions are to the effect that the hot sand bath seems to combine with the benefit from the heat—reducing pain and stimulating local circulation—a direct action on the muscles from the weight of the sand. This relaxes the muscle and tends to break up the various circles of pain and muscle contraction. This relaxing effect on the muscles from the sheer weight of the sand has been overlooked before, they think, but they regard it as an important factor in the effect, promoting resorption as well as combating the possibly unsuspected hypertonia in the muscles. Another advantage of sand baths is that they can be graduated with precision to fit conditions in the weakest. The only contraindications are febrile diseases, valvular defects, great instability of the circulation, and possibly anemia and asthenia.

Wise Animals.

A polar bear in a zoological park used to sit on a rocky peninsula that ran out into a water-filled quarry. Visitors were in the habit of throwing buns into the water and some of them floated on the surface. It was often easy for the bear to collect half a dozen by plunging into the pool, but he soon discovered a more interesting way to get them. At the edge of the peninsula it scooped the water gently with its huge paw and made a current that brought the buns ashore.

Embarrassing Moment.

One evening my friend and I went to church. As it was raining we both wore our rubbers. We had to go upstairs in the balcony because the lower part of the church was filled. My friend took his rubbers off and one of them accidentally fell through the opening in the railing. The dirty wet rubber hit a bald-headed man squarely on the top of his head. He turned around and gazed at us long and hard. So did everyone else. We made our escape hurriedly with profuse blushes.—Exchange.

Temperature of Coal Mines.

The bureau of mines says that coal mines are not warmer in winter and colder in summer. The heat of the earth increases one degree for every 100 feet of depth. Coal mines are not usually very deep and therefore not affected to any great extent by the heat of the earth. The temperature of the mine depends upon the location and the depth.

Felt It Was Being Overdone.

Some playmates came early one morning to spend the day with Betty. All went right merrily until about four o'clock in the afternoon, when Betty's eyes began to droop for want of her afternoon nap. She tried to keep on playing, but finally came to me and said: "Can't they go now? I have had a low measure of fun."—Exchange.

EDITORIAL FROM THE MORNING OREGONIAN

Mr. Williams For Committeeman. Will H. Hays, who but lately retired as chairman of the republican national committee, pays tribute in a telegram to the service performed to the republican party by the committeeman for Oregon, Ralph E. Williams. Mr. Hays should know. His testimony may be accepted as something more than a mere polite and formal expression of approval, to be expected from one member of the organization for another; for it is supported by the entire committee, which, not many months ago, by unanimous vote of the representatives of forty-eight states elected Mr. Williams vice chairman. He is the oldest member in point of service, and it is obvious—it is not denied by any one—that his standing with the heads of the republican party is very high.

The national committeeman is a party job. It pays nothing in salary but it carries many responsibilities, and calls for work. Its rewards are, of course, recognition of leadership, and the prestige and influence that go with it. Mr. Williams has been the committeeman for Oregon for fourteen years, and is a candidate for re-election. There is no good reason why he should not be re-elected; there are good reasons why he should be, the most obvious and unanswerable of which is that he has a high place with the committee, is on terms of intimacy and confidence with the national leaders of the republican party, is in line for the national chairmanship, and can, and doubtless will, perform service which no new man, whatever his qualities, can possibly perform.

The Oregonian is reluctant to interfere in the contest for national committeeman but the advantages to the republican party in Oregon of Mr. Williams' election are so plain that it feels it should point them out.
