McNary Not for Williams

United States Senator Repudiates Interview of Republican Chairman Tongue

The man was Lester A. Felton, out from Ohio on a mining venture, and later world famous as the inventor of the Pelton water wheel, the device which forms the basis of the great turbines which transform water into electric energy.

Felton said many times that the idea of the invention came to him when he saw the effect of the water blast coming in contact with the cow's nose. Within an hour he was rigging up a wagon wheel with empty cans tied to the rim and was able to prove the value of what was later to be his great invention.

Senator McNary's telegram was also a repudiation of the interview of Thomas E. Tongue Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, in which Mr. Tongue attempted to make it appear that Senator McNary was for Williams.

Senator McNary announces in his telegram that he is maintaining an attitude of strict neutrality in the National Committee-man contest, and also in other Republican primary contests.

McNARY'S TELEGRAM
Senator McNary's telegram is as follows:
Washington, D. C. April 26.
Chas. T. Early, President Fithian club, Portland, Oregon:
Have authorized no one to record me as supporting either Mr. Williams or Mr. Fithian for National Committeeman. Am taking no part in this or any primary contest in Oregon and I assume no responsibility for interviews issued or literature published by the adherents of either contestant. I shall retain my neutrality, despite any efforts to involve me in the contest.

Chas. L. McNary.

GOT IDEA FOR WATER WHEEL

World Greatly Indebted to Humble Cow and Man's Quick Perception for the Turbine.

The huge hydro-electric power development now reaching every part of the world owes its origin to a homely incident which took place in California many years ago, in which an early day miner and his cow were the chief factors.

History and legend relate that on a hot day in the summer of 1860 a typical placer miner of that period toiled on his claim. To supply water for washing the gold-bearing gravel he had provided a long length of ordinary hose, and as the fall above was considerable the water gushed from the hose with decided force. As the sun sank the cow came to the workings to slake her thirst, and was in danger of upsetting some of the sluices and other devices of the placer miner. So the man turned the hose on the cow. By chance the water blast struck the cow in her cup-like nostrils, throwing her head back sharply.

The man was Lester A. Felton, out from Ohio on a mining venture, and later world famous as the inventor of the Pelton water wheel, the device which forms the basis of the great turbines which transform water into electric energy.

Felton said many times that the idea of the invention came to him when he saw the effect of the water blast coming in contact with the cow's nose. Within an hour he was rigging up a wagon wheel with empty cans tied to the rim and was able to prove the value of what was later to be his great invention.

USED TIME TO ADVANTAGE

Napoleon Profitably Occupied Hours Which He Was Forced to Spend in Unjust Confinement.

When Napoleon I was forming the Code Napoleon, he astonished the council of state by the readiness with which he illustrated any point in discussion by quoting whole passages, extempore, from the Roman civil law, a subject entirely foreign to him, as his whole life had been passed in the camp. On being asked by Treillard how he had acquired so familiar a knowledge of law, Napoleon replied: "When I was a lieutenant I was once unjustly put under arrest. The small room assigned for my prison contained no furniture, save an old chair and a cupboard. In the latter was a ponderous volume, which proved to be a digest of the Roman law. As I had neither paper, pen, ink or pencil, you may easily imagine this book to have been a valuable prize to me. It was so bulky, and the leaves were so covered by marginal notes in manuscript, that had I been confined 100 years, I need never to have been idle. I was only ten days deprived of my liberty, but on recovering it, I was saturated with Justinian, and the decisions of the Roman legislators. It was thus I acquired my knowledge of the civil law."

Appropriate, What?

The Church at Work, published by the National Council of the Episcopal church, tells of a resourceful native-organist who was called upon suddenly to furnish the music for a mission wedding ceremony at Hankow, China. The bridegroom had recently become a Christian. Following the custom, he sent a beautiful sedan chair and a brass band to escort the bride to his home, where the ceremony was to be performed. Something delayed the bride, and the impatient young man hurried down to the mission house, where it was decided to have the wedding on the spot. A meeting was in progress in the church, so it was impossible to have the brass band play. Whereupon one Elsie Li was commandeered to play the wedding march. There was no sheet music on hand, and Elsie was not equal to the task of playing Mendelssohn from memory. She was strong, however, on one good old march tune, and accordingly the wedding party were dumfounded and amused a few minutes later when the bride and bridegroom marched blithely forward to the altar to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War."

"Passion Play" Result of a Vow.

The Oberammergau "Passion Play," a dramatic representation of the sufferings of Christ, originated from a vow made by the inhabitants of the little Bavarian village in 1683, with the hope of staying a plague then raging. The original text probably was made by the monks of Ettal, but the parish priests have since carefully revised it. The music was composed by Rochus Dedler in 1814. The play is given by amateurs in a purely reverential spirit, and not for gain. It requires a cast of about seven hundred persons. In 1901 an $80,000 playhouse was erected especially for the presentation, which is given every ten years. The first performance was given in 1634.

Too Long to Wait.

Mr. Oldsmith—Do you refuse me because I'm too old? I'm practically certain to live 30 years more.
Miss Phillips—Oh, no! You're not too old. You're about 30 years too young.

Unique, as It Were.

"Rhode Island," said Muriel to her father during the course of her study after dinner, "is celebrated for being the only one of the United States that is the smallest."

ONE OF THE IMMORTALS

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift fleeting meteor, a fast flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
Man passes from life to his rest in the grave.

The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade,
Be scattered around and together be laid;
And the young and the old, and the low and the high,
Shall moulder to dust and together shall lie.

The infant a mother attended and loved,
The mother that infant's affection who proved;
The husband that mother and infant who blessed,
Each, all, are away to their dwellings of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye,
Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by;
And the men'ry of those who loved her and praised,
Are alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the king that the sceptre hath borne,
The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn,
The eye of the sage and the heart of the brave,
Are hidden and lost in the depth of the grave.

The peasant, whose lot was to sow and to reap;
The herdsman, who climbed with his goats up the steep;
The beggar, who wandered in search of his bread,
Have faded away like the grass that we tread.

The saint who enjoyed the communion of Heaven,
The sinner who dared to remain unrepentant,
The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just,
Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flowers of the weed,
That withers away to let others succeed.
So the multitude comes, even those we behold,
To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we are the same as our fathers have been—
We see the same sights our fathers have seen—
We drink the same stream and view the same sun,
And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think;
From the death we are shrinking our fathers would shrink,
To the life we are clinging they also would cling,
But it speeds for us all like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but the stars we can not unfold;
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumbers will come;
They joyed, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

They died, ay! they died; and we things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwelling a transient abode,
Meet the things that they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yes, hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
We mingle together in sunshine and rain;
And the smiles and the tears, the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other, like surge upon surge.

'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death,
From the gilded salon to the bier and the shroud—
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud!
