THE REVIEW is entered at post office in Portland, Oregon, as mail matter of the second class under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

If it is within the scope of your most vivid imagination to picture a man—a real live, walking, talking, breathing he man—who having attained that mystic art of successfully directing the strange gesticulations of an automobile through the busy streets of Portland has not yet discovered that a blow out is a blow out—and does require some little repairing before the tire can again be inflated, harken to this:

Whang! went the tire. Mr. Wood B. Motorist ambling leisurely down the street brought Elizabeth Ford Sedan to a sudden stop beside the curb directly in front of a grocery store on Fessenden and Oswego streets. Out gets Mr. Wood B., immaculately dressed in his new tweed suit, pongee shirt, tan shoes, green socks, green tie and a new straw hat. Oh, my goodness gracious, Agnes, this was no place for him.

But—after a cursory inspection of that hind tire, he gets the pump from under the seat and regardless of his brand new clothes and the boiling hot sun he goes merrily to work, "pumping her up." Two hundred and fifty pumps, more or less, and 10 minutes later the tire was still flat. Nothing daunted, Wood B. discovers that his pump is no good and borrows one from the grocery man. Another 10 minutes of continuous pumping and still that tire lay flattened like a rattlesnake on a rail just behind the evening express.

Queer they make so many bum pumps! He stops Mr. Good Motorist who produces a three-valve pump absolutely guaranteed. No use—

"Guess your patch didn't stick," offers Good, as he returns from the grocery store and finds Wood B. still pumping.

"Patch," says Wood. "I did not patch it. The darned thing just went flat all of a sudden and I thought all you had to do was pump her up."

"You have another thought coming," says Mr. Good, as he picked up his pump and drove away.—Jessie L. Blew, in Sunday's Journal.

Deborah Livingston W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. B. A. Olson, 502 W. Richmond street on Monday afternoon when the annual election of officers was held. Mrs. L. Russell was elected president; Mrs. G. W. Overstreet first vice president; Mrs. Nora E. Meyer, second vice president; Mrs. Minnie Knox re-elected secretary and Mrs. D. Tallman treasurer, and Mrs. J. S. Kerr assistant. In a summary of the year's work as read by Mrs. Knox, secretary, the Union was surprised to find that the number of calls made upon the sick, the number of magazines distributed, bouquets, fruit and bundles of clothing by members of the Union run into the hundreds. A number of prominent speakers during the year included state and county officers and a state officer of California. During the year the president, Mrs. Overstreet had not missed a meeting and Mrs. M. Knox had not missed a county institute. The next meeting of the Union will be held at Peninsula Park on August 31, when a short business meeting will be combined with the annual picnic. Lunch will be served at noon when a speaker will be provided.

The residence of John N. Edlelsen in Irvington is undergoing extensive decoration by V. M. Pilip of St. Johns, who has had his crew at work for the last two weeks. Mr. Pilip, whose place of business is on upper Washington street, has many fine homes under his charge, among them one of the most expensive residences on Westover Terrace for Frank Ransom of the Eastern & Western Lumber Co.; the residence of B. F. Upshaw of the Ladd Estate in East Moreland, and Malarkey Bros.' building on Portland Heights.
