

Oregon City, Feb. 13, 1890.

THE MAJORITY'S DESPOTISM.

The past week has shown what we have to expect of the very slender republican majority in the present house of representatives; that is, it has shown what those have to expect who have minds able to follow or conceive what will be done by the unobstructed will of a few republicans who have no other law than their own wish, and their conception of what legislative acts will best tend to keep the "plums" of office in their hands, or on the way to their capacious stomachs.

It was to be expected that the party that was in the majority would not in the least consider the wishes of the minority even though that minority represented an actual majority of the voters of the nation. If they had confined themselves to this one who remembers the Star Route experience, or the infancy of the Post-Trade's reputation, need have been surprised; and but few would have a word of fault to find with the men, however much they may have objected to the measures. But when the representatives of all the people are not satisfied with doing acts detrimental to their own reputations, but must attack the principles and overthrow the rules on which the business of the country is constitutionally conducted, even their political enemies must protest.

The very rules that that autocrat, Speaker Reed, who at present is using his exalted position solely to show his own littleness, has overthrown, were established by the party which at present it is to be hoped—his misdeeds have been going to be remedied. Though balked by the rules he had made, you did not resort to unconstitutional means to accomplish your ends when you were in power, yet we do not intend to be hampered by any such thing as parliamentary law. Really, though, no one ought to be surprised that the successors of those who found excuses and means for violating the constitution, should not regard the constitution of legislative assemblies.

Were it not for the violation of our rights as citizens of a republic, we could get more of satisfaction than of the opposite out of the present high-handed proceeding going on at Washington. None but the most hide-bound partisans will support such measures. And as the change of a very few votes would have changed the last two elections, so most likely they will change the next. So, while their own acts will be a millstone about their necks, yet we do not feel disposed to entirely devote ourselves to rejoicing. If it were simply our defeat they were accomplishing, nobody would object, any more than just hard enough to make them keep on. But when those in public life do acts that result in more than a smother on their own fair fame, should keep on till their hands are washed, and the next time to make a protest—and the only one for which they care—that the ballot box may not be neglected.

The Montana Ballot System.

Colonel W. A. Clark, of Butte, Montana, one of the most prominent democratic politicians of the new state, says that there is no chance that the political situation will be changed or the deadlock in the Montana legislature broken until the U. S. senate examines the credentials of the four men who will go to Washington and ask to be seated as senators. Colonel Clark does not agree with Colonel Broadwater, the member of the democratic national committee from Montana, that the Australian voting system is all bad. On the whole it is an excellent law. "As the law in many respects it would be better if changed to suit the country. In the outlying districts of Montana, as yet but sparsely settled, the law imposes a hardship upon the voter. He is forced to ride sometimes 100 miles over the prairie or through the mountains until he reaches a registration place, where he can merely certify that he resides in the precinct. When the day for voting comes, he must take the ride over again, and be prepared to resist a challenge, and to prove that he is the registered voter. The feature of the law which requires registration is all right in the cities and the thickly settled districts, but it is wrong in the other parts of the state, and should be done away with."

MOLALLA ITEMS.

Nothing heard of now in the woods but echoes of the flood. The Molalla was the highest ever known—15 inches on W. H. Vaughan's barn floor, three feet in F. C. Perry's cellar. T. W. Austin died of lung fever February 11, aged 71 years. The band entertainment was postponed from January 31st to February 7th, on account of the storm. The following was the programme rendered: PART FIRST. Music, Overture by J. S. Dungan, Band. Farce, Pompey's Patient, Company. Song, My Dutch Gal's Name, F. H. Dungan. Recitation, Duchess of Maud Muller, J. Y. Harless. Song, Mary Kelly's Bean, F. H. Dungan. Music, Negro Medley, Band. PART SECOND. Sketch, Wonderful Telephone, Company. Farce, Absent Minded, Company. Then followed songs, gags, and comic sayings, by the Molalla Minstrels, which kept the audience in a roar of laughter while being rendered. The evening's entertainment closed with the side splitting farce entitled Handy Andy, or the Stripped Sergeant, performed by Wm. Mackrell and J. V. Harless, old residents of Molalla, and A. L. Cornwall, the new druggist. Monday evening a party of young folks gathered at Miss Julia Moody's and passed a very pleasant time. HIGH FLYER.

When Baby was a girl, we gave her Castoria, When she was a child, she cried for Castoria, When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria, When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

THE FLOOD.

The result of the flood throughout the Willamette valley has been disastrous in the destruction of property in some localities, yet for the height of the water and the rapidity with which it came, we have good reason to congratulate ourselves on escaping with so small a loss.

The total damage to property in Oregon City will in the aggregate amount to about $120,000, falling principally on the large corporations, although some of the losses fall on those who depend upon day's labor for a living and are ill able to bear it.

The number of small losers would be too numerous to mention, as all the residents on water street and Goose Flat have suffered either in loss of furniture or damage to buildings. Beside this the factories will be unable to start up until repairs are made, throwing a large number of the operatives out of employment. In this city there has been but one drowning accident, and for being so fortunate in this respect we should consider ourselves especially favored.

During the time when the water was highest, and in fact, all the time while the flood was raging, business was suspended, but has again resumed its normal activity and hopeful signs are indicated on every side. All the different corporations and mills have men engaged in clearing out the debris preparatory to resuming work. The managers of the W. P. & P. company say they will put in a dynamo of their own to furnish electric light, and will work night and day. They will have the large 200-horse power engine in less than two weeks raising on the pulp.

All the merchants have again opened their stores, and although with some of them the loss has been considerable, they all consider that their have been very lucky, as their damage has been very small in proportion to the amount of stock they had on hand. The business men consider the flood a blessing rather than otherwise; coming when it did the result has been easy to bear. By this experience we have been taught that mills or houses properly built are able to withstand the greatest floods ever known here and in the future substantial structures will be erected.

Already the W. F. Excelsior company have made arrangements to begin rebuilding, and it will be a better equipped and larger factory than that carried away by the flood. The Crown Paper company will resume active building operations as soon as the water is in its natural channel. George Broughton, having saved almost all his logs by having them securely boomed, will begin at once the erection of a much larger and better sawmill than the other. The new mill will be located near the mouth of the Abernethy.

A prominent real estate man of this city writes to the writer that this would not depreciate the value of real estate, and that he would just as much prefer property on Main street as before and he wished he had a chance to buy. The rains and run in some localities the city has been washed away, and fever-breeding and pestiferous holes thoroughly cleaned. It temporarily mourns the loss of property, the renovating character of the flood may prove a blessing in disguise.

Reports from other places in regard to the flood show a large amount of property destroyed. In Portland the individual losses are very small, although the water was higher than ever before known. The merchants expecting it, had ample time to remove their goods to a higher elevation and a great part of their loss was the cost of labor in removing the goods. McMinville reports show that a great deal of damage has been done to bridges. Throughout the whole county a great many have been more or less injured; at Dayton the bridge over the Yamhill river, the only one totally destroyed. County Judge Longhry thinks $6000 will cover the losses in the county.

Wheatland had a hard time. Reports say that it was completely inundated, the inhabitants moving out and leaving their homes to almost certain destruction. There was one large warehouse there, said to contain 25,000 bushels of wheat, and this is thought to have been a total loss. At Independence matters are not half so bad as have been reported. Six thousand will cover all the damage. The principal loss was the carrying away of Prescott & Veness' sawmill. The engine and boiler are all right and nearly all the lumber lies high and dry on the low lands below the town where it can be easily reached with wagons. Over 200,000 bushels of grain is stored in warehouses and not a single bushel was damaged. The Independence people consider their greatest damage was in being unable to get their daily mail, but thinking it will not be a few days before they will have bridges repaired so that they can make connection.

Benton county is a heavy loser. The bridge over the Mary's river is a total wreck. It floated during the flood and was tied to each bank, but when the water subsided it was found that the piers had been washed away, and the whole structure sank into the river. Benton is a very large county and many streams intersect it, and the loss of bridges everywhere is almost universal. A conservative estimate of the loss of the county, including the Mary's river bridge, which will cost $200,000 to replace, is $25,000. Just across the river, in Linn county, the lowlands were flooded about five miles eastward, but beyond the scattering of fences over the fields, and the destruction of several barns and a few head of cattle, the damage will be light. It will cost about $2000 to repair the government reventment work above Corvallis, but its efficacy in keeping the river in its channel, though severely tested, has been fully proven. It has saved many hundred acres from total ruin. The Alsea river overflowed its banks and the valley had the appearance of a lake. In many places the water was ten feet higher than any high water mark known, the result being much loss of stock and property. Many miles of fencing in that section were washed away and the mountain side in some places washed down into the canyon. Some of these slides were 500 feet square and all so deep that in many instances gigantic trees were carried hundreds of yards downward and are standing erect in the canyons below. In other cases big trees have been broken like pipestems and piled up with dirt 50 feet high, forming immense dams in the mountain streams, and creating small lakes.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES.

Patti is in San Francisco. Ninety Indians of the Siwash tribe were drowned at Vancouver, B. C., last week. At Halsey, Oregon, it was resolved to offer a cash bonus of $4000 to any person who will build the most complete mill for the sum offered.

On the 8th inst. at Kalama, a drunken fisherman named Fred Stone was drowned by falling off the sidewalk into deep water. E. H. Bellinger of Salem, a prominent business man, was drowned in North Mill creek near Salem, on Saturday during the high water of last week. At Olympia last week Mrs. John Guinn accidentally split the contents of a pot of boiling coffee on her 17 month's old baby, scalding it badly. The child will die.

Monday morning Southern Cal. was slightly shaken by an earthquake. It was felt in Pomona where several pains of glass were broken, and in San Diego it was accompanied by a rumbling noise. The Union Pacific company have made arrangements with the government to carry the mail between Portland and San Francisco for $1000 a round trip as long as the blockade continues. Nine fine seals drifted ashore at Clatsop one day during the recent storm and were captured. Three fine skins were brought to Astoria on the 8th. The value of the whole catch is at least $300. Judge Sabin made a decree in the U. S. circuit court last week, ordering the sale of the Oregonian Press & Printing Co. property, including the printing press, and the mortgage on foreclosure of mortgage, providing that the certificates issue by the receiver be paid first.

Conrad Bucher, a tobacconist of Astoria, committed suicide at that place on Saturday by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. The cause was despondency over ill health and the fact that he was a cripple for life. He leaves a son and considerable property.

Ed. Smith, who fought George LaBlanche of Denver, has issued a challenge offering to fight any man in America white or black, by any rules, for $1000 to $5000 a side in six or eight weeks from the time of signing the articles, within 500 miles of Denver. The cannery at Salem is now an assured fact, as all the stock has been taken and they will be ready to go to work as soon as the manager arrives from the East. The new cannery is a challenge offering to fight any man in America white or black, by any rules, for $1000 to $5000 a side in six or eight weeks from the time of signing the articles, within 500 miles of Denver.

Each day during which the blockade on the Central Pacific and California and Oregon lines has continued, the Southern Pacific officials have felt hopeful that the following day would see the blockade raised. Fresh storms have come, however, and have been a great snow almost as clear as crystal. The rotary plow has done splendid work on the west slope of the Sierra mountains.

At Seattle on February 8th fire destroyed three canvasback stores with all their contents causing a loss of $42,000. The fire started in W. F. Kelleher's dry goods store, and was caused by a kerosene lamp exploding, throwing burning oil over a display. In a minute the whole of the structure was in flames and before the fire department could prevent it, the adjoining tents occupied by the Banner saloon and H. Horschler's furnishing goods store. The contents of the three stores were partially insured.

It is probable Los Angeles boasts of the youngest grandmothers in the United States. Her name is Mrs. Cordella. She is only 71 years of age. She was married when she was only 15 years old. Her oldest daughter was married at 18, and Mrs. Cordella became a grandmother when she was 33. Her eldest granddaughter married last April just after she had passed her 16th birthday, and last week there was born into the family a great-granddaughter. Mrs. Cordella says it is not surprising to much to think she will see her great-granddaughter before she dies. It is estimated by roadmasters that it will take 1500 men a month to repair the railroad track injured by washouts and slides through the Cow creek canyon. One mile and a half south of tunnel No. 23, a mountain 2000 feet high and into the valley, covering the track for a distance of 800 feet and extending back toward the mountains 2000 feet. This slide completely blocked up Cow creek the night of February 4 and held the water back till 5:10 p. m. the next day, when it broke through, carrying everything before it. The depth of the water above the railroad track on the slide this dam was 75 feet. This might have been a repetition of the Johnstown deluge but for messengers who had given timely warning to all through the valley below, so that they could escape. A large rail bridge south of the dam was raised to a height of 10 feet above the track and left hanging on the mountain side. There is enough snow on the mountains to produce another freshet.

The damage caused by the floods of last month in Los Angeles and suburbs is found to be near $750,000. A short distance below the railroad channel on the Laguna ranch, which covers 11,000 acres, the center of which was a lake covering 1000 acres. The river entered this lake and carrying sand to a depth of one to two feet over 100 acres. After leaving here it spread out over a level country, inundating a large number of ranches and leaving them covered with water up to their roofs. The change in the channel caused the river to empty into the San Gabriel some six miles above where the former lands were. The lands between this city and Laguna are in a high state of cultivation and a considerable amount of the damage at a quarter of the million. R. S. Baker, owner of the Laguna ranch, estimates his loss at not less than $200,000. Below that place various estimates of from a quarter to half a million have been made, but the total damage is believed to be a good three-quarters of a million. Passing beyond the city limits the first serious damage was at the Orange, Los Angeles county ranch of W. H. Bassett. When the river overflowed its banks the water began filling up the channel between two rows of trees, but the wrecks of bridges which were washed out piled up against the Santa Fe railroad bridge, a short distance above the ranch, and formed a dam which diverted the water from its regular channel and turned it through the orchard. This channel took a deeper and wider. The settler's ranch for its best crops of New-burn and 100 tons of hay, wagons and other farming implements, 200 acre tract, and a number of walnut and other fruit trees, to the value of $100,000.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure. This is beyond question the most successful cough medicine we have ever used. It cures Croup and Whooping Cough, and the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Whooping Cough. It is the cure of Consumption in its early stages. It is a discovery of a new principle, since it is the only medicine that can cure Consumption in its early stages. It is a discovery of a new principle, since it is the only medicine that can cure Consumption in its early stages. The steamer La Plata from Buenos Ayers arrived at Astoria, and spent the night at the value of $1,250,000 was missing. It is supposed they were stolen during the voyage.

One day last week a laboring man was digging a ditch in G street, San Bernardino, Cal., when he unearthed an oyster can full of money. He kept it in his pocket and left town the next morning.

Martin Costin, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer near Martinsville, Ind., is the father of twenty-one children, but his present wife, although he is but 50 years of age. Nearly all the children are living.

Fernes the new president of the Brazilian republic was waited on by a large crowd, in front of his residence on the 5th st., who desired him to accept the dictatorship for five years. He refused and had the people dispersed by the police.

Advices from London indicate that a strike of gigantic proportions is impending among the steeple and dock laborers, which will throw the former great strike in the shade. The employers as well as employees are banded together and it means a struggle to the death of one of the unions.

A Texas mule belonging to William Drew of the 7th district of Thomas county, Georgia, fell into a well there thirty five feet deep one day the latter part of last week. Although he remained in the well three days before he was taken out, he was found to be uninjured, and is now at work as usual.

A company has been formed in Minneapolis, Minn., to develop iron mines near the headwaters of the Mississippi. They were discovered three years ago, and were thought to be of little value, but a more recent investigation shows 66 per cent. iron in the ore and that the mine is worth twenty million.

The funeral of Mrs. and Miss Tracy, wife and daughter of the Secretary of the Navy from the White House last Wednesday was attended by a large crowd. Army and navy officers attended in full uniform, as well as public officials. The pall bearers were members of the cabinet.

A writer in an eastern journal talking about church choirs says they have become the training school for the comic opera stage. "The good deacons may not believe it possible, but a glance at the history of the most popular sopranos and prima donnas shows that they graduated from church choirs."

A Montreal man has been condemned to pay the sum of $1 as damages for having called upon a person in a factory with a view to collecting a debt. The court held that the domicile of the debtor is the proper place at which to demand money that is owing. It further held that the street for the purpose of money that is due constitutes an assault.

The queen of Greece had a narrow escape from a frightful death last week when driving through the streets in an open carriage an electric light wire broke and a portion of it fell upon the queen and tightly wrapped her. Within a minute after the wires were removed from her carriage she was turned out and her escape is regarded as almost miraculous.

At Vincennes, Ind., the other day Policeman Gus Robertson's wife presented him with a pair of fine boys. Five years ago that very day Mrs. Robertson became the mother of twin girls. It is a rather remarkable coincidence that both of those double births should have occurred on the same day of different years making up the number of the members of the same family fall on the same day of the year.

The Polish church war at Plymouth Pa., has been renewed. The Polish and Lithuanians were taken out to the cemetery and dug up the bodies of the Lithuanians which were buried under protection yesterday. The coffins were broken open and two bodies dragged all over the ground and thrown over the fence. The bodies were horribly incinerated by pick axes used in breaking up the coffins. The three Lithuanian coffins were taken out of the graves, but the bodies were not distributed. When armed Lithuanians arrived on the scene the Poles fled. There is talk of lynching law. Thousands of people gathered on the mutilated bodies and buried them.

Lucy Lisle, why do you not go on with those button-holes? Miss Fox, you will be so good as to change your seat from the window to the middle of the room at once!"

AGENTS WANTED FOR MISSOURI STEAM WASHER. Active territory all over the State of Missouri. The above pictures are wood cuts. The other was taken in December, 1888, when completely recovered, and entirely through the use of Dr. Allen's English Remedy for Consumption. The above pictures are wood cuts, but they are true to life and the original photographs, taken from life, can be seen at all the drug stores. Mrs. Harvey's case began as consumption, possibly caused with a cough in the morning, ending in a chronic and depressed condition, a loss of appetite, the loss of flesh and pain through the body. She did not realize her case until she had been almost blind for some time, but she was restored to health by Dr. Allen's English Remedy for Consumption. It will be sold by all druggists. You can't afford to be without it.

No more cooking with lard than the ordinary kind, and cannot be adulterated in competition with the multitude of low price, short-weight adulterated imitations. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 100 Wall Street, New York.

THE STORY OF A YEAR. PHOTOGRAPH FROM LIFE TAKEN ONE YEAR AGO. "What is she going to do with it?" asked Miss Fox in a whisper, as Madame rustled off to scold the errand girl for putting too much coal on the fire.

PHOTOGRAPH FROM LIFE AS SHE NOW APPEARS. "But you don't mean," said the bewildered Flora, "that Madame takes the silk that is left in the customers' drawers?" "Goose!" cried Miss Fox, "don't talk nonsense any longer. It's what every fashionable dressmaker does, and—"
