We have found charcoal a very excel-lent thing to furnish our poultry with. It may be given in a powdered state, mixed with the soft meal feed, and a little pulverized sulphur at the same time may be added to advantage. But the very best way to supply this is to burn an ear or two of corn (upon the cob), charring it to blackness and throw-ing it before them. They will devour every kernel and so supply themselves with a grateful and healthy substance that sweetens the crop and serves as an admirable tonic to the stomach. At this season of the year the above recommen-dation will be found a valuable hint to poultrymen. Hens about ready to lay will devour this prepared charcoal eager-ly, and the increased freshness and red-ness of their combs afterward evince the efficacy of this allowance. They will never do this if they have free access to it at all times. It is when they have been kept from it, and so have become salt-hungry, that they will overeat. Salt is an essential element of the blood, and is as neces-sary to stock as to human beings. Many of their common foods are lacking in it, and consequently it must be artificially supplied. We cannot tell exactly how much they need, and so the plan of feed-ing them stated amounts at stated times is wrong. Put it where they can get it themselves, and they will take just as much as they need and no more. AGRICULTURAL NOTES. AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Taking Tes in a Stable.

Taking Tes in a Stable. The Baroness von Zuylian, of Paris, has the finest stables in the world for her mag-nificent horses. Even those of the great exar himself do not equal them in magnifi-cence. On Sunday afternoons she takes her tas in the stables, where down the cen-ter of the great building a thick pile car-pet is placed leading up to the table for sugar from their mistress like pet dogs. The buildings cover three acres of ground.--New York Sun. A cement floor is not at all necessary in a chicken-house if the location be a dry one. Keep the floor littered, and there will never be a foul floor. Be careful to have good ventilation in the dairy room during warm weather. It can best be kept open for this purpose at night when the air is coolest.
