FARM AND GARDEN.

Blundering Management of the Feet of Horses Deprecated.

FIRST PURPOSE OF THE FARM.

Than Any Five Acres of Staple Crops-Notes.

No weed can live that is not permitted o stick its head above ground and Removing corn tassels for the purpose of increasing the yield has thus far been of little avail.

Wide tires on the wagons are impor-tant. In France, where they have the best roads in the world, four to six-inch tires are common Farmers who burn wood had better haul their winter supply while the roads are yet solid and work in the wheat field is prevented by drought.

Poultry of the best breeds are now so plentiful that unless for fanciers, show and breeding purposes a trio or two may be had for a trifle. They will amply re-being wasted. It need not be very large nor very expensive. Built with due economy, it will pay large interest upon its cost every year. Do not neglect to make a general cleaning up of the farm before the cold weather sets in. Leave no rubbish about. It looks unsightly, makes more work for you in the spring and, worst of all, is a place to harbor and breed vermin.

place to harbor and breed vermin.

A good garden will give more profit than any five acres of staple crops. Even if you do not like to work in it, the score of economy alone should be sufficient argument for having it. And besides being profitable the garden is healthful. If the districts of Europe where there is a hay famine were a little nearer, we would see a boom in the cultivation of grasses. As it is, our farmers would find it no loss to give more attention to this, and possibly a little less to wheat and corn for a time.

The healthfulness of farm life is one The healthfulness of farm life is one of its advantages over other occupations, which cannot be measured by money value. When you are inclined to complain of poor crops and low prices, it is a good idea to stop and think about the compensating features.

Those who have raised young stock for the fall trade will be busy for some time. The early birds must be sold as soon as possible to make room for later hatches, and the very late chickens must have a comfortable place for their special use If you have some money to spend in improvements about the farm this fall. see if a windmill will not be of some help. A good water supply comes handy for so many purposes that, if you have not such already, it will pay to go to considerable expense to secure it.

ECONOMY IN PEEDING.

Good food and system in feeding are the most important of the many needs of farm animals. Many farmers are poor stockmen because of a failure to secure wholesome food and to give it regularly, as well as carelessness in the mixing and adjusting of rations, says Orange Judd Farmer. The reason for giving certain grains at certain times. Sugar—D, 5½c; Golden C, 5½c; extra

Orange Judd Farmer. The reason for giving certain grains at certain times and in certain quantities is not understood. The successful feeder knows when to give different kinds of grains, hays, etc., and carefully notes the effects on the animals. If bad results are apparent, another ration is tried. By careparent, another ration is tried. By careful experiment the proper amount of each individual animal is determined. Ordinarily the common farm foods are very desirable stock feed, but there are times when they are not as suitable. While corn, oats, rye, barley, etc., either singly, any two of them, or all in equal amount in a mixture, usually furnish safe food for stock, discretion is required to know when a change of diet is desirable. Regular hours for feeding are most im-portant. One-tenth of the food usually given in winter could be withdrawn

ABSOLUTELY PURE without being missed if the remaining nine-tenths were given with the utmoregularity. Economy in feeding is more adily accomplished by providing some wholesome food at regular intervals.

The most careful horse breeders are agreed that the lighter the shoe and the less it is worn the better. In a recent address before an England agricultural society Prof. Axe discussed the subject, deprecating the blundering management of the feet of horses. Often fine horses are ruined by being caused to wear their shoes too early and too long. Standing in the stable a long time is liable to cause lameness, and could be avoided by taking off the shoes and substituting soft leather. Red-hot shoes should not be applied to the foot of the horse at any time. In plowing, cultivating and many other farm occupations a horse will walk ten to twenty miles a day, and advances about four feet at a step. At each step the horse lifts half a pound extra on its four feet—667 pounds in every mile. In a day's work of fifteen miles the horse would lift 9,900 pounds extra, or nearly five tons. If the force required to lift five tons of iron could be expended in the work the horse is doing, much more could be accomplished. In the light of these facts is it any wonder that when young horses begin to wear shoes they soon become leg weary, have their steps shortened and acquire a slow walking gait?

Standing proudly erect he waited in touching silence.

Nobody offered to buy anything.

Then the mighty son of the forest pretended to faint. He fell to the floor and called dramatically for fluids to relieve the aridity of his bronchial tubes.

Still no one purchased.

Hiawatha rose regretfully to his feet.

"Gentlemen," he exclaimed, "this is a poor crowd. I don't believe you have as much as a Sloux among you."

Superstitious people are alarmed by the unusual or the unexpected. Occasionally in a late, cold spring English birds will tap on the house windows in hopes of a meal. If the inmates are superstitious, the tapping is looked upon as a warning. A doctor was one day in February summoned in haste to a farmhouse on the moor. He found an old man in bed, but the profest health and saked why he had
